Allies Raiding Germany, Bomb-Torn Paris Hints; Clamor for War Grows as Italian Cabinet Meets

Senate Votes Funds to Navy For 1,011 Planes And 43 Ships

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

The Senate voted an 11 per cent expansion of the fighting strength of the Navy yesterday as renewed demands for immediate dispatch of arms to the Allies were debated on the floor.

At the same time, Administration leaders sought to block Germany from gaining a foothold in the Americas by serving notice that the United States would oppose any attempted transfer of land in the Western Hemisphere from one non-American power to another.

An Administration - sponsored resolution setting forth this principle was introduced in the Senate and House. Proclaiming in plain language, a long-standing element of the Monroe Doctrine, it evidently is intended as a warning against Nazi claims to Dutch, Danish or even British or French possessions in the Americas.

Approval of the $654,000,000 naval bill, which would authorize 21 warships, 22 auxiliary vessels and 1,011 warplanes, came by voice vote after a short debate on the measure itself.

Pepper Renews Plea

But the unanimous chorus of ayes followed a clash as acrimonious as the Senate has seen in many a day over a proposal the United States send Army and Navy planes, guns and ships to aid the Allies.

Senator Pepper (Democrat), of Florida, renewing his plea that the President be authorized to sell arms from War and Navy stocks "to crush Hitler," was challenged by Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri. Clark declared the Pepper proposal amounted to a declaration of war and suggested he and "other members of the fifth column for intervention" take the train for Canada and enlist.

These developments highlighted a day of action on the defense front. Other moves were:

Secretary Morgenthau asked four automobile corporations—Packard, Chrysler, Ford and Studebaker—to begin the production of aircraft motors needed for warplanes. A fifth, General Motors, was asked to expand such activity.

250 Planes Sent to Allies

Three British, Norwegian and Greek freighters left Staten Island for France with 150 American bombing planes aboard. One hundred other warplanes for the Allies air forces left New York over the week-end, it was revealed.

Chairman Hinckley of the Civil Aeronautics Authority announced that the expanded air training program, scheduled to turn out 45,000 new pilots by July 1, 1941, will be started immediately without waiting for Congress to appropriate additional funds. Some 15,000 pilots are to be trained by September 1, he said.

In a conference late yesterday, House Republicans voted unanimously for Congress to stay in session "as long as the interest of the country requires."

Senator Clark, during his clash with Senator Pepper, charged that the British Ambassador to the United States, Lord Lothian, "had put out propaganda" that unless

Ran $600 to Millions

Joseph Schenck Indicted As $400,000 Tax Evader

$52,000-Per-Year Bookkeeper Named As Codefendant

New York, June 3 (AP).—Joseph Schenck, who ran a stake of $600 into millions and mastery of one of the film industry's great corporations, was indicted today by a Federal grand jury for income tax fraud, conspiracy and making false statements to Government investigators.

The one-time Russian immigrant boy who long ago dreamed of power and success as he doled powders and pills in a dingy Chinatown drug store was charged in one count with having defrauded the Government of more than $400,000 in taxes from 1935 to 1937.

In Hollywood, Schenck termed the charges "unfair" and said he was "confident that when all the facts are finally determined full vindication will result."

Named as codefendant in a conspiracy indictment was Schenck's $52,000 a year bookkeeper, Joseph H. Moskowitz, who was accused of aiding his employer in evading income taxes.

Schenck was charged with having fraudulently deducted from his gross income "losses" from the purported sale of stock to his Hollywood friends, and with having claimed as business expenses expenditures which actually were personal

Gov. Wilson, Valentine Lead In Iowa Races

Ideal Corn Weather And Interest in War Cut Primary Vote

By the Associated Press

Des Moines, Iowa, June 3.—Gov. George A. Wilson moved into a narrow lead over H. R. Gross, former Des Moines radio newscaster, in early returns for the Republican nomination for Governor tonight, Irving H. Knudson, of Jewell, was running a weak third.

Returns from 536 of the State's 2,450 precincts gave Gross, 30,998; Knudson, 6,192; Wilson, 33,609.

State Senator Ed Breen, of Fort Dodge, had lost the lead to John K. Valentine, former Federal district attorney, in the Democratic gubernatorial race, the count standing: Breen, 12,214; Valentine, 17,341.

Ideal corn growing weather and interest in the war cut down the primary election vote.

The Wilson administration took over the Statehouse after a Republican victory in the 1938 election ended six years of Democratic State control.

Gross confined his campaign exclusively to radio addresses. He turned down all personal appearance invitations.

In the Second Congressional District, Representative W. S. Jacobsen, Democrat, started out with a 3-to-1 lead over George W. Koob, of Dubuque.

Vincent F. Harrington, Democrat, held a slight lead over State Senator Lester F. Gillette in the Ninth

Jessel Injured, Secretary Says

Los Angeles, June 3 (AP).—George Jessel's attorney, in requesting continuance of a damage suit, said the comedian had suffered a paralytic stroke but later Jessel's secretary minimized the trouble.

The secretary said Jessel was merely hit in the head by a ball playfully tossed by his 16-year-old bride, Lois Andrews Jessel.

75,000 Pilots Begin Training On June 15

CAA Would Provide 9,000 Military Fliers by 1941

Training for 75,000 civilian pilots, including 45,000 fledglings, will begin June 15 in coordination with Army and Navy needs, the Civilian Aeronautics Authority announced yesterday.

The greatly expanded program, which C. A. A. Chairman Robert Hinckley said has been dictated entirely by the demands of national defense, will provide 9,000 aviators, equipped to enter Army and Navy secondary training courses by June, 1941.

This compares with 73 new pilots equipped for this purpose during the past year, in which 10,000 young men and women received elementary ground school and flight training.

More than 500 of the 45,000 youths who will receive their initial flight instruction under the expanded program will be trained in the Washington area. Only 110 were trained here last year.

The $5,000,000 which Congress has appropriated for the 1940-41 training period will be used immediately, Hinckley said. This, however, will be insufficient to complete even the summer program. A request for an additional $32,000,000 is now in the hands of the House Appropriations Committee.

"I think that under the present emergency we can not wait," Hinckley continued.

The year beginning June 15 has been divided into three training periods, the first ending September 1. Fifteen thousand new pilots will receive primary flight instruction in each period.

Two novel features of the program are secondary training for 9,000 graduates of the primary course and "salvaging" the experience of thousands of civilian pilots who had begun flying careers at their own expense but who had allowed their certificates to lapse.

The enlarged program, first step to create a giant mechanism en-

Flag Salute Rule in Schools Held Valid by Supreme Court

By John B. Oakes
Post Staff Writer

A requirement that public school children must salute the flag even against their religious principles was held to be constitutional by an eight-to-one majority by the Supreme Court yesterday, over Justice Stone's objection that the Bill of Rights was being violated.

In the ruling opinion, written by Justice Frankfurter, the court maintained that Legislatures had the right to insist on the salute to the flag as a symbol of national unity. And "national unity," said Justice Frankfurter, "is the basis of national security." The wisdom of the particular method of instilling "patriotic impulses" in children is "not for our independent judgment," the opinion added.

Justice Stone, on the other hand, asserted that the law which the majority was upholding "does more than suppress freedom of speech and more than prohibit the free exercise of religion," and goes so far as to try to coerce children to express

Mussolini May End Suspense, Announce Entry Into Conflict

By the Associated Press

Rome, June 3.—With clamor for action against the Allies rising, the Italian cabinet prepared to meet at 10 a. m. tomorrow (4 a. m. E. S. T.), perhaps to end the world's suspense as to Italy's intentions about entering the war.

While the Fascist grand council, as the nation's highest policy-forming body, generally is called upon to approve any major step Premier Mussolini intends taking, no meeting of that group was presently scheduled. The cabinet is an executive body, rather than a policy-making group such as the council.

[The United Press reported, however, that Premier Mussolini will meet with the grand council in the evening, probably about 12 hours after the cabinet meeting.]

British Guarded

A special Carabinieri guard was thrown around the British consulate tonight.

Ten thousand war veterans today declared their willingness to cross "the mountains toward victory" as the clamor for war action increased.

At a convention in Turin they said they awaited only Premier Mussolini's order.

The day brought these other developments of war fervor:

Loudspeakers were erected in public squares of many cities, presumably to amplify a call to arms.

Many more of the 50,000 Italian residents in Egypt were reported leaving.

Blood Donors Organized

Blood donors were organized for public service.

Factory workers pledged loyalty.

A trade delegation from Yugoslavia was received and this was viewed by some as a tentative sign Italy does not plan to invade Yugoslavia.

The government announced indefinite postponement of the 1942 Rome Exposition, once pointed to by Mussolini as proof of Italy's peaceful intentions.

More reservists were called to their regiments.

Pope Pius XII conferred with the Papal Nuncio to Italy and some said the Pontiff, like President Roosevelt, may have made a new attempt to induce Mussolini to stay out.

Reich Radio Raises Total to 1,200,000, CountingDutch,Belgians

By the Associated Press

Berlin, June 3.—A tremendous blow aimed at destruction of the French army appeared tonight to be the next Nazi move as Germany claimed at least 330,000 French and British prisoners among the gains of her three-week plunge through Flanders.

This figure, called "preliminary" by the high command, is about half of the number of British and French the Nazis have claimed were trapped in Flanders. It does not count Belgians and Dutch or the number of Allies killed in the fierce fighting for the English Channel ports.

(The German radio broadcast a report that 1,200,000 Allied troops have been captured since May 10. The figure includes Dutch and 500,000 Belgians as well as an additional 150,000 French and British

Dud Bomb Hit Over His Head, Bullitt Reports

Copyright by New York Times

William C. Bullitt, the United States Ambassador to France, told President Roosevelt over the transatlantic telephone yesterday in describing his narrow escape from death in the German bombing attack on Paris that "God must be with me."

BULLITT

The Ambassador sent a report of the bombing to the State Department but before that was received Mr. Roosevelt, upon hearing the news reports of the narrow escape of his envoy, called Bullitt on the telephone. The Ambassador confirmed the report and gave the President details of the attack and his escape from injury.

State Department officials were both excited and immensely relieved that Ambassador Bullitt had not been hit.

In his report to the department, Bullitt said he had gone to attend a luncheon given by the French air minister.

The reception and dining rooms of the building where the luncheon was to be held are on the roof, with a balcony outside the reception room.

"Just before luncheon," Bullitt's report continued, "the air raid siren

Nazis Shifted For New Drive On French

Bolster Aisne, Saar Lines as Dunkerque Attacks Continue

Paris, June 3.—The Germans shifted their military weight tonight from northwestern France, overridden in the battles of the Meuse and Flanders, to new theaters of action.

Except for the Nazi air raid on Paris and continued fierce attacks on Allied forces at Dunkerque, there was comparative calm in the war zones for the first time since the invasion of Holland, Belgium and Luxembourg, May 10.

Semiofficial reports said 280,000 Allied troops, including 120,000 French, had been removed from Dunkerque, which the Germans penetrated momentarily yesterday.

17 German Planes Strafe Narvik

Today and Tomorrow

Resistance and Appeasement: Two Questions Before U. S.

By Walter Lippmann.

THE CONVICTION is mounting that the successful resistance of the Allies is a vital interest of the whole American hemisphere. But in the minds of many there is doubt, and therefore hesitation, arising from two questions. The first is whether the United States is able to contribute enough and to contribute it soon enough to insure a successful resistance to the total conquest of Europe, Africa, and Asia. The second is whether, if the United States tries and fails to reinforce the resistance of the Allies, it will not thereby draw down upon itself the vengeance of the victors.

These questions must be faced with clear eyes and a stout heart. By our capacity to answer them wisely there may well be decided our future as a free and as an independent nation—as a nation guaranteeing liberty in its internal affairs, and in its relations with the rest of the world, a nation independent of dictation, intimidation, and blackmail, not to speak of revolutionary conspiracy or actual invasion.

WHEN WE EXAMINE the feasibility of helping the Allies to resist, we must, I submit, bear in mind that there are many degrees of resistance. The Belgians resisted bravely in the Flanders battle until their King suddenly surrendered; the French and British are resisting with incredible bravery and they have not surrendered. Why? Where do men, ordinary men from civil life, find the courage which the Allies are displaying, the courage to do or die? They get it from the conviction that their cause is just; they get it from the realization that to live and surrender is infinitely worse than to fight and to die;

Vast Armada Saved Troops

Britain Counts 30 Naval Units Lost in Rescue of B. E. F.

By the Associated Press

London, June 3.—Great Britain tonight officially counted six destroyers and 24 minor war vessels out of a vast armada of nearly 900 naval and private crafts as her sea losses in the great retreat from Flanders which rescued thousands of Allied soldiers from the Nazi war machine.

At the same time, the admiralty announced the blocking of the harbor at Zeebrugge, Belgian port now held by the Germans, with concrete filled ships. Zeebrugge was a German submarine base during most of the World War.

The admiralty's admission of naval losses was preceded by a Ministry of Information announcement that there was "not a vestige of truth" in German claims the Home Fleet flagship Nelson had been sunk. (In Berlin, a well informed German source said today the Nelson had been sunk May 11. The German high command still has not mentioned the Nelson.)

In the air, the British reported new attacks upon German troop concentrations, supply lines and strategic centers in northwest Ger-

Radio Stations In Reich Silent; Blow at French Capital Kills 45

The War Today

SUSPENSE is the keynote of Europe's news, after a day of sporadic ground fighting on the Somme-Aisne front and a full-dress German air raid on Paris which killed 45 persons and cost the Germans 17 planes.

DUNKERQUE, Allied port of exit from Flanders, held off German attackers, and British and French troops continued the evacuation which the British admit cost 6 destroyers, and 24 minor war vessels. Fate of Calais, and of the French rear-guard fighting to reach Dunkerque, was uncertain.

GERMANY again forecast a drive to crush France's army, and the French noted German reinforcements along the Aisne, but Britons continued to prepare home defenses, and both France and Britain watched Italy, whence the next move was expected.

Bombs Rain on Paris

By the Associated Press

Paris, June 3.—Bombed by waves of hundreds of German planes in fighting array in the first big attack on one of the three major belligerent capitals in this war, Paris tonight cleared up the debris and waited for an Allied answer in kind.

The temporary silence of several German radio stations caused speculation whether the French and British might not already have started their reprisals within 12 hours after the attack on Paris in which 1,650 bombs were dropped, 45 persons killed and 149 wounded.

(Radio broadcasting systems in New York and London said German stations shut down included Stuttgart, which is directed for broadcasting to France; DJZ in Berlin, and Munich and Nuremberg, Nazi party headquarters and convention city. Radio stations are shut down in raids to prevent enemy planes from "riding the beam" to their goals.)

17 Planes Shot Down

"It is to be expected the German action will not remain unanswered, and that German towns will have to bear the consequences," French stations said, in repeating London news broadcasts.

At least 17 of the 250 to 300 German raiders, bombers and fighters were shot down, the French said.

"Most of our pursuit planes were the most modern types," said a French communique significantly.

The air ministry hinted the Nazi raid may have come as retaliation for bombardment last night by French fliers of numerous German airports.

Its announcement, coming only after the French capital area was attacked in the early afternoon today, said more than 30 tons of explosives were dropped on Germany Sunday night.

Out of Misty North

The Allied high command, in announcing that 17 of the 250 to 300 attacking German planes were blasted out of the sunny June skies around Paris, emphasized that the count was still incomplete.

The German planes in great waves roared out of the misty blue north shortly after noon. They flew in steady procession over the very heart of the city, and as the air raid sirens shrieked and the hundreds of guns fired away they swept down their high explosives and in-

House Vote Due Today on Labor Act Amendment Rule

Preliminary fireworks on altering the Wagner Act are scheduled to be set off in the House today in what promises to be a brief but bitter debate on a rule allowing the proposed amendments to reach the floor.

After passage of the rule, which is generally anticipated, the House is expected to set aside temporarily the whole question of amending the Wagner Act in order to take up the conference report on the naval appropriations bill.

Country Wants 'Pay-as-You-Go' Defense Program, Senators Say

Tydings, Connally And George Urge New Taxes Be Raised

By the Associated Press

An influential group of Senators, arguing that the country wants a "pay-as-you-go" defense program, urged on the floor yesterday that Congress raise at least $1,000,000,000 in new taxes before adjournment.

Senator Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, brought up the question with a suggestion that Congress raise between $1,500,000,000 and $2,000,000,000. The measure now pending before the House Ways and Means Committee, approved by the Administration, would provide $656,000,000 a year.

Senators George (Democrat), of Georgia, and Connally (Democrat), of Texas, said that the tax measure should provide at least $1,000,000,000. George predicted that Congress would broaden the tax base before adjourning. He also suggested higher taxes on all incomes up to $60,000.

George said a revision of the existing income tax schedule might make it unnecessary to increase income taxes by a flat 10 per cent, as proposed in the House. He said that the percentage increase might be applied only to corporation income.

"Close to War" Says Tydings

As to his base-broadening proposal, George said the present $1,000 exemption for single men might be cut to $500 or $600 and that the $2,500 exemption for married persons might be reduced to $1,600 or $1,700.

Tydings declared the country must realize that "we are very close to war."

"There is more danger of financial chaos after this war than there is from the possibility that this country might be invaded," he added.

Tydings erected a big chart in the Senate showing the Federal deficits of the last 10 years. He pointed out the figures with a pointer.

"We have got to get every dollar we can from every man," he said.

Broadening of the income tax base was favored by Noel Sargent, secretary of the National Association of Manufacturers, appearing before the Ways and Means Committee.

Lower Income Exemptions Urged

He recommended that the present exemptions of $1,000 for a single person and $2,500 for married persons be cut to $500 and $1,500 respectively.

He estimated this change would yield between $300,000,000 and $400,000,000 annually. But Representative Cooper (Democrat), Tennessee, said the figure would be closer to $80,000,000.

In addition, Sargent proposed that corporate dividends, taxes at the course, be removed from individual income tax schedules and suggested reductions of existing surtax rates.

These proposals should be supplemented, the witness testified, by removing what he termed "iniquities" in the corporation rates.

Companies should be permitted to file consolidated returns, he continued, and the taxation of intercorporate dividends should be eliminated.

Army Captain Dies Of Gunshot Wound At Walter Reed

Leaving notes explaining his intention, Capt. William O. Van Giesen, 40, Army Engineer Corps, yesterday apparently killed himself with a shotgun charge through the head in a washroom of Walter Reed Hospital, where he had been a patient.

Hospital officials were unable to explain how the victim smuggled the gun into the hospital. Van Giesen, who had suffered a nervous breakdown before coming to the hospital to recover more completely, had been in an open ward and was able to leave and reenter the hospital grounds freely.

A note telling of ill health and a letter to his wife, Gladys, were found in his breast pocket, according to police. The death weapon, a 16-gauge sawed-off shotgun, was found at his side.

Capt. Van Giesen was a native of Michigan and had last been stationed at Fort duPont, Del. Previously he had been stationed in Puerto Rico.

Cummings Urges Third Term

Hartford, Conn., June 3 (AP).—Homer Cummings urged tonight "with the fervency of prayer" that President Roosevelt be reelected "for our country's sake."

The former United States Attorney General, in a prepared speech opening the two-day Democratic State convention, coupled the plea with the assertion that the third-term tradition "must, of course, yield to the public good."

Cummings is a delegate to the conclave which will name Connecticut's 16-vote delegation, tomorrow.

Senator Alben W. Barkley, of Kentucky, keynoting the two-day convention, joined Cummings in an appeal for "national unity."

"The hosts of free America will protect the freedom of America under the leadership of Franklin D. Roosevelt, not because he was elected as a Democrat, but because he is the President of the United States and the spokesman of our people," he said.

Rep. Jones Rejects Judgeship To Stay as Roosevelt's Aide

Gives Up Realized Ambition to Run Again for Congress

REP. MARVIN JONES

Chairman Marvin Jones of the House Agriculture Committee yesterday turned down a Court of Claims judgeship at the request of the President to run again for his present House seat.

Jones' appointment to the United States Court of Claims, a long-standing ambition, already had been confirmed by the Senate and the Texan had only to take his oath.

In a telephone conversation Sunday night and again at the White House yesterday, the President urged Jones to remain in Congress through the present crisis and he agreed.

The Agriculture Committee chairman has fought the Administration's farm program battles in the House since AAA days. The President is reported to want Jones at the committee helm to cope with any domestic farm situation that may arise from the war.

Yesterday was the deadline for filing in the Texas Democratic Congressional primaries next month, and nearly a dozen persons are understood to have filed for the House seat Jones expected to vacate. Jones must now run against the field.

The President frequently has taken this means of keeping his key Administration men in Congress. Before the war turned for the worse he made a similar request of Chairman Doughton of the House Ways and Means Committee, who will run for reelection after planning to retire.

3d-Term Foes in Senate Quit; 'Draft-Roosevelt' Move Grows

By Robert C. Albright

Post Staff Writer

Third-term opponents virtually abandoned their long-pending move to place the Senate on record against reelection of the President.

While New Dealers clamored for withdrawal of all other Democratic candidates, Senator Holt (Democrat), of West Virginia, said he probably never will offer his Senate resolution against a third term for any President.

Holt said revival of the antithird term resolution at this time would serve no effective purpose and would almost certainly face the charge of injecting "politics" into the present defense picture.

Urges "Draft Roosevelt"

The Senate, meanwhile, heard from Senator McKellar (Democrat), of Tennessee, a plea that all Democratic aspirants, "except our President," step aside before the Chicago convention so "that he may be drafted to run, and that he may be renominated by acclamation."

McKellar later told reporters he thought Secretary of State Cordell Hull would make a "splendid" running mate with the President.

Mr. Roosevelt, with the assistance of Hull, "is responsible for the successful course pursued by the United States in this crisis," McKellar told the Senate. He said the country never had a greater Secretary of State than Hull, "but the responsibility of keeping us out of this war was that of the President."

No Withdrawals Yet

The Tennesseean's Senate speech echoed last week's third-term plea by Federal Security Administrator Paul V. McNutt, who likewise urged other Democratic contenders to "withdraw." None has accepted the invitation.

McKellar discussed one by one the Democratic aspirants, from Vice President Garner and Postmaster General Farley to Senator Wheeler, Senator Barkley, Senator Tydings, Speaker Bankhead and McNutt. He termed these all "able and worthy men" and said with the President's help "perhaps any one of them could be elected."

In abandoning "as long as present conditions continue" his anti-third term resolution, Senator Holt said he is still unalterably opposed to a third term and still believes it would "constitute a threat to democracy."

Sees Resolution Defeated

If his resolution were offered now he said he feared it would almost certainly be defeated by a nearly solid phalanx of Democratic votes and the effect would be to help rather than slow the third-term move. The war, he said, would be advanced as a reason for voting "no."

Even if the resolution were adopted, he pointed out, it would not actually bar a third term but would merely express the "sense" of the Senate. He said he had no wish to inject a political issue of doubtful effectiveness at this time.

The youthful West Virginian was defeated for renomination but asserted: "Don't worry, I'll be back here some day."

Republicans, meanwhile, were organizing quietly for their national convention in Philadelphia June 24, and for the resolutions committee meeting preceding it, June 17. On the inside track of candidates, backers of New York District Attorney Dewey and Senator Taft, of Ohio, were fighting it out with conflicting delegate claims. In the stretch, Wendell L. Willkie, a dark horse and late entry, apparently was coming up fast. Oren Root, jr., before the Young Men's Board of Trade in New York yesterday, predicted Willkie's nomination. Root said "delegates from all over the country have promised to vote for Willkie if there is a third ballot."

Slayer to Seek Roosevelt Pardon

President Roosevelt will be asked to commute the sentence of William (Major) McAffee, colored janitor, scheduled to die in the electric chair Friday for the slaying of a white woman here in 1937, McAffee's lawyers said yesterday after the Supreme Court refused to review the case.

Attorney Robert I. Miller said a request would be filed with the Department of Justice, asking the department to recommend commutation to President Roosevelt.

McAffee's counsel, appealing from the Court of Appeals, told the Supreme Court the janitor was too drunk when he killed Mrs. Henrietta Barbara Anderson, Treasury clerk, to be mentally capable of the deliberation and premeditation necessary to constitute a first-degree murder offense. Mrs. Anderson was beaten to death with a furnace shaker in an apartment house in the 1800 block L street northwest where McAffee was janitor.

Dies Warns of Fifth Column Threat in Area Served by TVA

Tennesseeans Testify At Secret Session, Confirm 'Suspicions'

Reports of a fifth column threat in the Tennessee Valley Authority region, scene of a vast power development, were transmitted to the White House and TVA officials yesterday by Representative Dies (Democrat), of Texas.

The House committee investigating un-American activities yesterday heard testimony from six Knoxville residents in a three-hour secret session. Dies declined to discuss the nature of the testimony but said it confirmed his "suspicions."

He said Representative Starnes (Democrat), of Alabama, another committee member, might fly to Knoxville to confer with TVA officials, but added that the FBI and other Federal agencies are in a better position than the committee "to follow up these leads."

Approve Transfer

The House, in another development, approved President Roosevelt's reorganization order transferring the Immigration Service from the Labor Department to the Justice Department in order to tighten Government control over activities of aliens.

Passed by the Senate Friday, the reorganization resolution will take effect ten days after the President signs it.

C. I. O. leaders declared, meanwhile, that during the current "hue and cry" about fifth columns several legislative measures had been proposed which would lead to repression of labor.

In a report submitted to the C. I. O. national executive board, the organization's legislative committee, headed by John L. Lewis, asserted particularly that legislation barring employment of Communists and Nazis and limiting alien employment to 10 per cent of a plant's total personnel "would in reality be used against labor."

"Under the guise of discharging alleged Communists, employers would be permitted to evade practically all of the provisions of the National Labor Relations Act in their attempt to destroy union organization," the report said.

Attacks Fingerprinting

It also attacked proposed legislation for the registration and fingerprinting of aliens.

"All too truthfully this type of hysteria," the report declared, "is usually conducted with the primary purpose of attacking labor organizations and subsequently attacking all citizens who may entertain progressive or liberal views."

The Administration proposal for a 10 per cent boost in income taxes and higher levies on some consumer goods was criticized as an "attempt to make consumers pay the cost of the defense program rather than holders of large incomes or corporations."

The C. I. O. renewed its suggestion for increased taxes on excess profits, gift and inheritances and the upper income brackets, and erasing the tax exemption on Government securities.

The National Labor Relations Board again was assailed by Representative Cox (Democrat), of George, who asserted in a statement that it was a "nest of radicals and subversive thinkers" and had a "working agreement" with the C. I. O. which endangers efforts for national unity.

Union Votes for Purge

New York, June 3 (AP).—The International Ladies Garment Workers Union (Independent) convention today unanimously adopted a resolution to purge its Canadian locals of officers who are Communists, because of the war. The union has about 7,000 members in Canada.

Secretary of Labor Perkins told the convention that labor-management grievances "should not be permitted to interrupt or halt" the production of armaments for defense.

Federal Salaries to Escape 10% Slash, Officials Indicate

By Edward Ryan

Employe salaries will be spared in the President's drive to clip 10 per cent from Federal expenses outside the national defense program, it was indicated yesterday.

Budget officials were said to have advised against any arbitrary 10 per cent cut throughout nondefense activities. Instead, they will work toward an average of 10 percent.

Where pay rolls are reduced, budget officials said, it will be done through not filling vacant positions.

Officials emphasized that it was too early to give a final word on how the 10 per cent economy will be made.

First steps, already started yesterday, will be to review agency by agency the appropriations for the next fiscal year, and determine where the saving can be made.

The drive to save in nondefense work was announced at the White House by Secretary Early. Later President Roosevelt conferred with Budget Director Harold Smith on details of the program.

Meanwhile, Senator Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia, said he was "pleased" to hear the President's plan and said he had introduced an amendment to the relief bill, calling for a 10 per cent cut in all Federal activities except defense and fixed charges.

Byrd said its adoption would save $500,000,000 annually to be "dedicated to the purposes of national defense in this time of crisis." This, he said, along with a 10 per cent tax increase, retroactive to include incomes earned in 1939, would improve the Treasury condition by $1,000,000,000 and permit deferring questions of raising the debt limit until the next session of Congress.

Budget officials said they had already gone far in trimming the estimates of Government departments and agencies for the next fiscal year, before their appropriation bills went to Congress. Several agencies were cut further in Congress.

Now, to go after the 10 per cent economy goal, officials indicated they would tighten controls over agency expenses for each month, through boosting the reserves which are normally set aside for contingencies.

Secretary Early said that in 1939 these reserves which were saved out of appropriations added up to $179,534,000. These savings for the current fiscal year ending June 30, he said, are expected to be $184,000,000.

19 Governors At Parley Urge Defense Steps

Resolution Upsets Tradition; Guard Mobilization Ignored

By the Associated Press

Duluth, Minn., June 3.—Bombs over Europe blasted a 32-year-old tradition of the National Governors' Conference today and 19 chief executives in session here ditched the usual custom of not announcing any conclusions as a result of their discussions.

Sidestepping a conference rule against adoption of any resolutions, the conference approved a "statement" to the effect that "all necessary steps should be taken immediately to provide adequately and effectively for the defense of these United States, and each State pledges her resources, agricultural, industrial and military, to that end."

The statement, said Vermont's Gov. George D. Aiken who introduced it, "expresses an honest opinion—and avoids a little hot water." It ignored the controversial question of whether the Governors should back President Roosevelt in his bid for authority to mobilize the National Guard.

The discussion of the national defense statement highlighted the first day's activities of the conference, which included papers on State administrative and relief problems, and were topped off tonight by a talk by Gov. William H. Vanderbilt of Rhode Island, who warned other Governors that standards of public business must be improved if the Nation is to dodge the spread of dictatorships.

During the afternoon's consideration of relief problems, Gov. E. D. Rivers, of Georgia, advised those who regard the public aid program as temporary to remember that "the poor you have always with you."

The statement on national defense, adopted by the conference, said:

"Since there exists in the world today a crisis brought on by ruthless and unprovoked aggression which respects neither the territorial integrity, the sovereign rights, nor the peaceful intentions of neutral States, and seems to threaten the very existence of democracy itself, and

"Since it has been clearly and unmistakably demonstrated time after time within recent weeks that such aggression undertakes and respects only force, and that nations unprepared and consequently unable to defend themselves are speedily and without warning overrun, subjugated and destroyed, and

"Since the Governors assembled in this conference are not only the civil administrators of the several States, but are commanders in chief of the National Guards, and have a grave responsibility for the effectiveness of this and other important units of our national defense,

"It is therefore the consensus of opinion of this conference, in view of the situation confronting our common country, that all necessary steps should be taken immediately to provide adequately and effectively for the defense of these United States, and each State pledges her resources, agricultural, industrial and military, to that end."

Thousands of Christian Scientists gathered yesterday at their annual meeting in Boston and appealed for calm and more faith in God in the face of the present world turmoil.

First Lady's Training Proposal Questioned

Washington mothers yesterday raised questions about Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt's advocacy of compulsory nonmilitary national defense service for both boys and girls—particularly on the advisability of making it compulsory.

"I think such a plan should be voluntary at this point, although the compulsory angle might have to come later," said Mrs. Jouett Shouse, who said a son and daughter in her family are already pursuing summer studies along such lines.

"My first reaction is that I'm against such general compulsory training—until I know more about what the plan is," Mrs. Merle Thorpe, mother of two sons, said.

Against Plan for Girls

"I would be opposed to massing girls into camps for training, if that's what the plan would mean. But I wouldn't be opposed to some sort of camp training for boys for six or nine months," said Mrs. E. R. Finkenstaedt, mother of a debutante doughter, a 20-year-old son and another daughter 11 years old.

At her press conference Mrs. Roosevelt advocated compulsory training for service—but not necessarily compulsory military training—as a means of "building up a national physique, a national character and a people who know they really owe something to their government."

She stressed, however, that she did not consider it necessary for every young man to be trained to bear arms. She pointed out that there were other jobs, for both men and women, just as important in establishing national defense. She mentioned specifically the need for training in mechanical work, in agriculture and even in the realm of frugal housekeeping.

Details Not Worked Out

Pressed for particulars of a plan for universal training for defense, Mrs. Roosevelt said she had not worked out any details and that she did not know how much time for training should be required of each person. Earlier in her discussion, however, she had mentioned that a year's service would not be too much to require of every citizen, man and woman, boy and girl.

Mrs. John H. Overton, wife of Senator Overton (Democrat), of Louisiana, said she would not like to express an opinion on the plan until she knew more about it, but she raised the question whether there might be the danger of too much regimentation of youth. Her youngest child, a daughter, is 21 years old.

Mrs. Bruce Barton, wife of Representative Barton (Republican), of New York, also wanted more information before taking a stand on the question which might affect her daughter and two sons.

Views of Communists

Mrs. Roosevelt also said it was up to Congress to decide whether the Communist Party should be outlawed in this country.

When the question of whether representatives of the Communist Party should be allowed to speak over the radio, Mrs. Roosevelt said, "As long as we allow a Communist party in this country, its candidates should be given freedom of speech."

Fighting Tanks With Bayonets At Surrender, Belgian Says

'How Are We to Judge' King's Action? Asks Major Who Escaped

By the Associated Press

London, June 3.—King Leopold III of the Belgians surrendered an army which had been reduced to fighting German tanks only with bayonets, an army which its British ally could not reach to help and which would have caused "unutterable confusion" had it retreated into the British area, a Belgian staff officer said today.

"I do not see how any British staff officer could not have half expected surrender," declared the officer, a major of Belgian grenadiers.

He said his nation has 250,000 men training in France and hopes to have 300,000 troops in the field by fall to replace those surrendered by King Leopold.

A Belgian broadcast from France, heard in London, said the Belgian government in Paris had ordered all men between 19 and 35 called up immediately for military duties.

Begged to Be Taken

The major told how Belgian officers, noncommissioned officers and privates knelt on the bomb-swept beach at La Panne, near Dunkerque, and begged to be taken off to "fight again for Belgium's honor."

"They had fought a good fight," he said. "They had been without food, without ammunition, without sleep for nearly two weeks. They had seen their King and their world collapse. But they still wanted to fight."

He told of conditions which led to King Leopold's surrender.

"The Germans hit us hard and rolled us back from the frontiers," he related. "We had only 80 fighter planes and when these were gone we were at the mercy of the German airforce. British planes were busy elsewhere.

"Even so, for a while we did well. We relieved a British division on the Lys (River) 24 hours before they thought it could be done despite incessant dive bombing and machine-gunning.

"Daily we beseeched the hard-pressed B. E. F. for 600,000 bread or biscuit rations, for ammunition, for aircraft support."

"Some of the food reached us from England but the British had no ammunition or aircraft to spare. We fought armored cars and tanks with bayonets. But we fought.

"These troops were shaken after eight days. They had been bombed. They had seen their women, their sick, their old machine-gunned and bombed without retaliation. They were hungry. They were tired.

"Then the King surrendered. How are we to judge him? These were his people. It's easy to say 'fight on.' But it is a little harder when your ears cannot shut out the screams of the dying, when the wind reeks of the unburied corpses of your people."

"I Know It Was Wrong"

The major sighed.

"He made his choice. I wish it had been different. For many of us it was. I know it was wrong. For if the Germans had been what he thought they were—what some of us thought they were—we would never have escaped and the British army would have been annihilated."

The major declared King Leopold had informed Gen. Lord Gort, commander of the British Expeditionary Force, of his intention shortly before surrendering.

He declared Belgian officers saved from Dunkerque would help train the new Belgian army.

"We have a great example—the British army. They performed miracles when they were needed. Their artillery stopped the Panzer (armored) divisions, their courage steadied us all, their navy and merchant marine built a bridge of ships across waters of hell, their commander and his staff performed the most difficult of military feats with coolness, daring and wisdom."

French Mistaken for Belgians

The ministry of information said today French officers and soldiers had been reported insulted in English streets when mistaken for Belgians.

It added that "any Belgian officers at large in this country belong to the heroic band who threw over their own King and fought on."

The ministry later requested that the story be canceled.

STRIKE AT PARIS—German air raids as far south as the Rhone Valley and Marseille and a strong air attack on Allied troops still holding Dunkerque preceded the afternoon bombardment of Paris by Nazi warplanes. Britain said the German raiders attacked two hospitals ships in the Channel. Meanwhile, on land, the Nazis continued to hold the black-shaded area. A British report said the French wiped out an entire German division near Rethel we intervened in the war, the British might surrender their navy to Germany.

Stephen Early, White House secretary, said the President planned economies in nondefense Government activities, with the view of returning nearly $200,000,000 in appropriations to the Treasury next year.

Legislation to carry out President Roosevelt's request for authority to call out the National Guard and Reserves in case of need was introduced in the House by Chairman May of the House Military Committee. The committee will hold a hearing on the controversial proposal this morning.

Gen. George C. Marshall, Army chief of staff, denied reports that American troops are being prepared for expeditions to South America. "Troop movements now in progress," he said, "merely constitute the return to home stations of units recently engaged in maneuvers."

House Passes 3 Defense Bills

President Roosevelt asked Congress to appropriate $2,518,000 more next year to add 2,500 men to the Coast Guard. He also asked $236,000 additional for the Commerce Department to permit closer supervision over merchant ships, as a "precautionary measure against subversive influences in the ranks of seamen."

The House passed three measures affecting the national defense, including final action on a resolution to give quick effect to the transfer of the Immigration Bureau to the Justice Department where stricter supervision of aliens would be promised.

The other bills, which now go to the Senate, authorize a $357,000,000 Federal highway aid program for 1942-43, and $24,823,000 in rivers and harbors improvements of especial value to the Navy.

The naval expansion measure now goes back to the House for adjustment of minor amendments recommended by the Senate Naval Affairs Committee. It carries no funds, but naval officials have announced that $45,000,000 will be asked this session to start work on the fighting ships included in the bill and 43 other craft now authorized.

Chairman Pittman, of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, and Chairman Bloom, of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, presented the resolution opposing any change of possession of American territory. They declared it had the approval of the State Department.

Monroe Doctrine Principle

The measure declares the United States "would not recognize any transfer, and would not acquiesce in any attempt to transfer any geographic region of the Western Hemisphere from one non-American power to another non-American power." "In addition to other measures," it stated, the United States would immediately consult with other American republics if such a transfer appears likely.

As the principle laid down in the resolution has long been considered a part of the Monroe Doctrine, its introduction at this time was interpreted as an Administration move to let Germany know we would oppose any attempt to take over possessions in the Western Hemisphere of countries she conquers.

Senator Pepper, in his speech, assailed Hitler and Mussolini and declared that if Il Duce brought Italy into the war he will some day "feel the sting of America's lash on his body." He urged action on his resolution, tabled by a vote of 12 to 1 in the Senate Foreign Relations Committee last week, which would authorize the President to send planes, guns, and equipment of the Army and Navy to the Allies.

Clark, declaring himself "shocked" by "recurrent efforts of propaganda" to get the United States into the war, said Pepper was "damning himself to everlasting blame" on this score. He charged that Sir Wilmot Lewis as well as Lord Lothian have been "spreading propaganda" in behalf of the Allies.

Nazis Maneuver For New Assault

the Germans were adding reinforcements on the right bank of the Aisne River and at the same time "tightening contact with outposts" west of the Saar River.

(The Germans said they had driven back French outposts in the Forbach salient in this area.)

This apparently indicated the Reichwehr was regrouping its forces for its next smashing assault on France.

The French command's morning communique resumed the classic phrase of the early days of the war—"nothing to report."

But French observation flires reported German transfers appeared like "a fluid mass of men and material in perpetual movement."

The speed of modern mechanized columns plus the effectiveness of camouflage and the activity of anti-aircraft guns, however, cloaked the German activity in secrecy.

French Shell Nazis

A pause in operations was unusual for the Germans, who gave their enemy no respite in Poland, Norway, the Netherlands and Belgium.

French artillery shelled German concentrations today east of the Oise River in the central section of the Somme-Aisne front.

At Dunkerque the remaining Allied forces laid down an artillery barrage on attacking Germans and hoped for the arrival of the last units of the army of Gen. Rene Jacques Prioux, hero of the Flanders campaign, whose tanks and armored cars covered the withdrawal from Lille.

While Gen. Prioux's whereabouts have not been reported for days, the remaining units of his rearguard were reported 15 miles from Dunkerque today. (Germany has claimed Prioux and his staff are prisoners.)

many. The Air Ministry said all planes returned safely from the extensive forays.

The impression grew that the nation was ready for either of two eventualities—A Nazi onslaught on Britain itself or a new drive by Italy and Germany together on France.

The government was prepared to throw the weight of Britain's "new army" of half a million men—which observers believe is ready for the field—into a battle on the continent should Adolf Hitler and his generals seek to destroy an isolated France before settling accounts with England.

The withdrawal of British and French forces from Dunkerque kept on steadily. An authorized source said it would be difficult even to estimate the number brought out because those removed by the French navy were taken to France.

The admiralty listed these destroyer losses:

The 1,400-ton Keith, the 1,375-ton Basilisk; the Havant, one of six destroyers built for Brazil when the war started and taken over promptly by the British; the 1,335-ton Grafton; the 1,335-ton Grenade, and the 1,100-ton Wakeful. The last three were reported lost last Thursday.

Other losses listed were one fleet minesweeper, one gunboat, one air arm tender, five paddle minesweepers, one minesweeper, eight trawlers, three drifters, two armed boarding vessels, one danlayer (a small craft which drops "dan buoys" as markers to show the Channel has been cleared after minesweepers have finished their work), and one tug.

King George VI in a message to Prime Minister Churchill tonight praised the "bravery shown by the three services and the merchant navy" in turning the Dunkerque withdrawal from "disaster into triumph."

"So difficult an operation was only made possible by brilliant leadership and an indomitable spirit among all ranks of the force. The measure of its success—greater than we had dared to hope for—was due to the unfailing support of the Royal Air Force, and, in the final stages, the tireless effort of naval units of every kind.

"While we acclaim this great feat, in which our French allies too have played so noble a part, we think with heartfelt sympathy of the loss and sufferings of those brave men whose self-sacrifice has turned disaster into triumph."

"Triumph" Hailed

The admiralty communique, in part, follows:

"The most extensive and difficult combined operation in naval history has been carried out during the past week.

"British, French and Belgian troops have been brought back safely to this country from Belgium and northern France in numbers which, when the full story can be told, will surprise the world.

"The withdrawal has been carried out in face of intense and almost continuous air attacks and increasing artillery and machinegun fire.

"The success of this operation was only made possible by the close cooperation of the Allies and of the services and by never flagging determination and courage of all concerned. It was undertaken on the British side by several flotillas of destroyers and a large number of small craft of every description.

"This force was rapidly increased and a total of 222 British naval vessels and 665 other British craft and boats took part in the operation. These figures do not include large numbers of French naval and merchant ships which also played their part.

Volunteers Praised

"The rapid assembly of over 800 small craft of all types was carried out by volunteers. These showed magnificent and tireless spirit.

"Through the operation of the small craft registration order the admiralty already had full details of all available small vessels.

"The order for the assembly of these vessels met with instantaneous response. Fishermen, yachtsmen, yacht builders, yacht clubs, river boatmen, and boat building and hiring firms manned their craft with volunteer crews and rushed them to the assembly point, although they did not then know for what purpose they were required.

"They operated successfully by day and night under the most difficult and dangerous conditions. The admiralty cannot speak too highly of the services of all concerned. They were essential to the success of the operation and the means of saving thousands of lives.

Epic of Rescue

"The withdrawal was carried out from Dunkerque and from beaches in the vicinity. The whole operation was screened by naval forces against any attempt by the enemy at interference by sea.

"In addition to almost incessant bombing and machine-gun attacks on Dunkerque, the beaches and the vessels operating off them the port of Dunkerque and the shipping plying to and fro were under frequent shell fire. This was to some extent checked by bombardment of the enemy artillery positions by our naval forces. Naval bombardment also protected the flanks of the withdrawal. The enemy was active with submarines and high-speed motor torpedo boats. Losses have been inflicted upon both these forces.

"The operation was rendered more difficult by shallow water, narrow channels and strong tides. The situation was such that one mistake in the handling of a ship might have blocked a vital channel or that part of the port of Dunkerque which could be used. Nor was the weather entirely in favor of the operation. On two days a fresh northwesterly wind raised a surf which made work at the beaches slow and difficult. Only on one forenoon did ground mist curtail enemy activity.

"Withdrawal of this nature and magnitude carried out in face of intense and almost continuous air attack is the most hazardous of all operations. Its success is a triumph of Allied sea and air power in face of the most powerful air forces which the enemy could bring to bear from air bases close at hand."

Allied Bombers Striking Back at Nazis, Paris Believes

For an hour the din of thundering bombers and of the French pursuit ships which quickly gave chase, the roar of the guns and the chatter of machine guns and the blasts of the sirens filled the air.

Several bombs hit an important building in the city, but the censors banned transmission of its name or location.

(In Berlin, however, the Issy-Les-Moulineaux airport was described as an objective. This is the headquarters of the French air ministry.)

Bombs dropped on the homes of the wealthy and in the poorest slum districts.

The fighter-convoyed bombers swarmed on the capital itself after three week-end raids up and down the rich Rhone Valley as far south as Marseille on the Mediterranean and killed 56 and wounded more than 100. They also inflicted some 40 "casualties" on the Lyon area in the third raid, early Sunday morning.

When it was all over and workmen were already filling in the gaping holes in streets and sidewalks, and firemen were putting out the last of the fires, an official announcement offered these grim statistics.

Dropped 1,050 Bombs

The dead, 8 in Paris, 37 in the outskirts.

The wounded, 84 in Paris, 95 in the outskirts.

Bombs dropped, 1,050; 83 fell in Paris, 977 in the outskirts.

Fires, 13 in Paris, 46 in outskirts.

Buildings destroyed or damaged, 6 in Paris, 91 in outskirts.

Four schools in the city proper and four in the outskirts were hit. Fifteen bombs were said to have crashed into one school, serving as a hospital, killing two male nurses.

It was officially reported, also, that 10 children were killed and 18 wounded in another school.

Tonight columns of smoke rose from the industrial suburbs where heavy damage was inflicted, and the ruddy glow of dying fires was reflected against the sky.

(A brief communique, issued in Berlin, said the German bombers had "exclusively" attacked "the Paris airport at Issy-les-Moulineaux as well as other airports and hangars of the French air force in the neighborhood of Paris." An official denial was issued that bombs had been dropped on private houses in the interior of Paris.)

Noon Hour Raid

The raid started at 1:20 p. m. (7:20 p. m., E. S. T.) toward the end of the long French noon hour, when Parisians were lunching at home or sitting at the sidewalk cafe tables. Outside the bourse brokers stood in the sunshine, idling or talking of the market and the war.

At Sherry's, on the Champs Elysees, a party of a dozen elderly Americans were lunching quietly. They did not move when the alarm sounded, and throughout the hour they waited and watched.

The planes were seen circling slowly overhead, dropping bombs up the river as they moved down and over the Church of the Madeleine, the bourse and other historic and widely known places.

By this time the din was unspeakable.

Along some of the city's most fashionable boulevards and avenues, the fatal loads hurtled earthwards, jolting trees from the ground, bouncing lamposts out of their concrete setting, boring great craters and smashing windows.

Several bombs landed perilously close to the home of the Duke and Duchess of Windsor. On down the boulevard Suchet an apartment building caved in.

Chimneys Swayed

Beyond that place a frightened group stared glumly through paneless windows into a hole 40 feet deep, scooped thunderously out of their front yard.

Windows of buildings along the Seine clattered to the street in shattered fragments as the terrific concussions ripped them loose. Chimneys swayed and pieces of ancient building toppled to the streets.

British Spies Seeking to Involve Americas, Nazis Warn

Panama Canal Threatened, Berlin Claims

Sabotage Will Be Charged to Germans, Foreign Office Says

By the Associated Press

Berlin, June 3.—The German foreign office tonight warned the United States, Mexico and Panama that the Reich has information purporting show the British secret service has sent a "large number of agents" to Central America to create disturbances with the view to involving the Western Hemisphere in Europe's war.

The governments of the three American states were urged to take measures to forestall the alleged conspirators.

The foreign office said it had told the American governments that the agents were prepared to carry out two plans: First, to compromise Germany by making false revelations of German operatives in Mexico," and second, to promote sabotage in the Panama Canal with falsified evidence pointing to Germany as the perpetrator.

"After the crushing defeat in the Flanders battle, Britain looks to the United States as the power which may save it in the eleventh hour," said an authorized source. "The plots the foreign office exposed obviously were designed to disturb the good relations between the United States and Germany."

Nazis Active, Editor Says

New York, June 3 (AP).—Henry R. Luce, editor of Time and Life magazines, said today he had been informed by a trustworthy source that Nazi propagandists are making determined efforts to foment South American alarm and bomb plot stories in an effort to distract this country from what is going on in Europe.

Luce declined to discuss any other purpose of the supposed propaganda, but said a fear hysteria here could do much toward halting further Allied purchases of war materials, such as airplanes.

Warns of Menace

Santiago de Chile, June 3.—Chile's leading newspaper, El Mercurio, today demands an energetic campaign throughout Latin America designed to establish the immediate obligations of these countries in the presence of the dangers from abroad.

Latin America, the paper says, takes it for granted that the United States will look after the interests and sovereign rights of the southern republics, instead of just expecting from them economic and other cooperation in the vast continent-wide scheme of defense now contemplated.

It is apparent, continues El Mercurio, that Latin America, with 110,000,000 inhabitants and territory nearly three times as large as the United States, is still dependent on the United States, in spite of 120 years of independence, for military aid and economic support when the possibility of foreign aggression looms big on the horizon.

El Mercurio makes an appeal to all these countries to awaken to the fact that a grave menace threatens their peace and that the time has come for wholehearted, unstinted support of the United States' projects.

taken prisoner before the Flanders battle.

(The broadcast said German quarters estimated at 200,000 the British and French dead in Flanders and Artois.)

Challenging a British report that German casualties in Flanders had amounted to 250,000 and total casualties to date 1,000,000, the DNB, official German news agency, said today Germany's losses in the war in the west were a mere fraction of these figures.

Preparation for Onslaught

The German raid on Paris and repeated raids on the industrially important Rhone Valley and Marseille areas Nazis interpreted as the prelude to a smashing onslaught against France with all the might of the German armies.

Whether it is to follow immediately or await a breathing spell from the exhausting drive to the coast, Germans could not say, but the Nazi watchword has been "No rest for the enemy."

The authoritative Dienst aus Deutschland suggested that an attack on the Maginot Line near Forbach was further evidence that the signal for a smashing blow against France's defenses soon might be sounded.

The high command said the "enemy retreated to the Maginot Line and left prisoners, weapons and equipment in our hands when our troops made a forward thrust on both sides of Forbach."

The coincidence of the air attacks, the Forbach assault and the mop-up at Dunkerque, where Allied troops are still fleeing the Nazi trap in Flanders, was suggested as an effort to harass the French on widely scattered fronts to conceal the direction from which the next German lightning may strike.

Muck Holds Up Nazis

The Germans admittedly are experiencing difficulty getting through the mucky floods with which the Allies have ringed Dunkerque.

But air bombs and artillery shells thud constantly into the beleaguered port and the high command said the Germans, closing in from the west, south and east, had entered Bergues, about five miles to the south.

"Fighting planes and dive bomber units," its communique said, "continued attacks on Dunkerque on June 2. In this action, two destroyers, one patrol boat and one freighter of 5,000 tons were sunk, and one warship, two destroyers and 10 merchant ships were damaged by bomb hits."

On the other hand, it declared Allied raids Sunday night in west and southwest Germany were "against nonmilitary targets."

Air operations Sunday cost the Allies 59 planes—of which 27 were shot down in air fights, 10 by anti-aircraft fire and the rest destroyed on the ground—and the Germans only 15, the communique said.

Three U. S. Liners Periled in Plot, Germans Insist

Berlin, June 3 (AP).—The German press made sensational headlines today over an alleged plot against three American ships designated to take Americans in Europe home.

D. N. B., in a story which it said was delivered from New York "in a special way," declared that a neutral person just arrived there from London had informed it about plots by the British admiralty against the United States liners President Roosevelt, Manhattan and Washington.

Paris Prelude

Germany's aerial bombardment of cities in the Rhone Valley, now followed by a large-scale air raid on Paris, shows very clearly that Hitler's newest target is not England but France.

It can be expected that the Nazis will do all they can to worry Great Britain by sea and air so as to prevent her from exerting her full strength on behalf of her ally. But so long as the French army is intact and occupies a position along the flank of any German thrust at England, an invasion of England would be attended by risks which Hitler dares not take. Instead, he gives every indication of having ordered a new offensive against France.

The aerial raids on Paris, Marseille, Lyon and other French cities during the last few days are obviously the prelude to an assault by Hitler's mechanized divisions on the French position along the Somme. These raids are designed to accomplish several aims.

In the first place, they are obviously intended to weaken or destroy France's industrial effectiveness already impaired by the loss of Lille, Roubaix, Tourcoing and other manufacturing cities in northern France. Secondly, they probably have for their aim the forced maintenance by France of a large part of her air force for the protection of French cities well behind the lines.

A third consideration is the possibility that these air raids may weaken the morale of the French people, although experience has shown that aerial bombardments often have the reverse effect. And last but not least they may be designed, as French spokesmen insist, to prove to Mussolini that Italy could enter the war without danger of having her vulnerable industrial area in the Po Valley demolished by Allied air attacks.

During the past 48 hours, while the last stage of the Battle of Flanders was taking place in and around Dunkerque, the Somme front has been relatively static. But that is not likely to last long. The raid on Paris projects the grim shadow of new horrors which the German war machine is about to let loose against France.

Rights And Privileges

In periods of public excitement the fine line between liberty and license acquires a special significance. There is grave danger, on the one hand, that civil rights guaranteed by the Constitution will be recklessly suppressed as a means of promoting public safety. At the other extreme there is danger that complete freedom in the exercise of assumed rights may interfere with the effective functioning of democracy.

A delicate line between these two positions was skillfully drawn by the Supreme Court yesterday in its decision that local authorities may require children attending public schools to salute the American flag. The opinion written by Justice Frankfurter did not indorse or condemn the practice of requiring pupils to salute the flag. Some regulations designed to stimulate a "common feeling for the common country," the court said, may seem harsh and others foolish. But the court insisted that the State Legislatures have a right to exercise their discretion in such matters without interference from the courts.

Justice Stone's solitary dissent was based on the assumption that compulsory saluting in the public schools coerces Jehovah's Witnesses into expression of sentiments they do not entertain and which violate their religious convictions. But this view seems to overlook the fact that children are not compelled to attend the public schools. Saluting the flag becomes essential only if they claim the privilege of a free education offered by the State. Parents who do not wish their children to pledge allegiance to the flag have the alternative of sending them to private schools.

So it does not appear that the saluting requirement, arbitrary though it may be, violates any basic right. Obviously it has no connection with freedom of religion. If the United States supported a state church, a case could be made for refusal to salute the flag on religious grounds. But with our complete separation of church and state, there can be no religious or antireligious implications in a salute to the flag.

Long ago the Supreme Court decided that freedom of worship does not give a sect a right to indulge in every practice which it may regard as part of its religion. Freedom of religion extends only to the realm of spiritual belief and ritualistic practice. It does not permit any group to interfere with legitimate functions of the state under the guise of practicing their religion.

The Television Dilemma

After extended hearings the Federal Communications Commission last week rescinded an earlier authorization to introduce restricted commercial broadcasting of television programs next September. Commercialization is to be postponed until the industry can agree upon unified transmission standards.

There is good reason for doubt as to whether the FCC has been given authority under the Communications Act to make regulations of this sort. And that doubt has been enhanced by a recent Supreme Court decision defining the powers of the FCC rather narrowly. However, the commission claims jurisdiction under the mandate to "study new uses for radio, provide for experimental uses of frequencies and generally encourage the larger and more effective use of radio in the public interest." Other provisions of a general nature may possibly be stretched to cover the present case.

Leaving these jurisdictional questions aside, the major issue is whether the progress of television would be furthered most effectively by promotional activities or whether it is in the public interest to insist upon further experimentation. In case of unregulated industries, of course, such a question would not arise. Industrial pioneers promote sales of their products as soon as feasible regardless of the rapidity of obsolescence. David Sarnoff, head of the R.C.A., says, for instance, that "we live on obsolescence."

That view is not shared by the FCC which concludes that a heavy public investment in television sets at current levels of efficiency would freeze transmission standards and block progress. Since the commission itself until quite recently believed that limited commercialization would make for more rapid progress, the position now taken is certainly debatable.

There are, however, certain technical arguments advanced by the FCC in favor of further experimentation which have considerable force. The very nature of television and its operation, it is stated, tends "to cause the particular system of transmission to which it is geared to become a firmly rooted and immobile standard." Widespread distribution of sets under present conditions, the FCC fears, would further undermine incentives for advancements.

So the R.C.A., which has spent large sums on preliminary developmental work, will be prevented from pushing the sale of its products until the corporation and its competitors can agree upon transmission standards for a single uniform system of television broadcasting. The wide diversity of views and the conflicting interests of manufacturers who have urged and opposed immediate commercialization of television programs suggest that such unity will not be easily attained.

The test will come later when the results of further experimentation are known. As different processes are perfected, the industry may be able to reach an agreement regarding standards. When it does so, the FCC has promised to assist in working out its problems.

The issue has at least been clarified, but the problem of obsolescence cannot be solved by marking time. Without commercialization the incentive to spend money on experimentation is weakened. And even after unified standards have been adopted, further progress can be made only by discarding obsolete equipment.

Discounted Victory

The epochal Battle of Flanders is approaching an end. The rearguard action at Dunkerque has served its purpose, now that evacuation of the Allied army is all but complete. Soon that port, too, like the rest of the Atlantic coast from Jutland to the Somme is likely to be in German hands.

Anthony Eden, the British war secretary, was stating the unvarnished truth when he admitted in his radio address last Sunday that "Germany has made great strategic gains." But the loss of territory, including valuable Belgian and French industrial areas, tells only part of the tragic story of the Flanders defeat.

Large numbers of Allied troops have been killed, wounded or taken prisoner by the Germans. Vast quantities of Allied material were destroyed in the fighting or left behind. The loss of mechanized equipment will be particularly felt, for in this vital category, as in air power, the Allies have been at a disadvantage.

There is no discounting the superficial magnitude of the victory won by Hitler. But Germany's losses have also been terrific. And the success of the stroke has fallen far short of Berlin's anticipations. The morale of the British and French people, of the British and French armies, was not destroyed but has instead been strengthened by the grim events of the past three weeks. The Allies have been inspired and encouraged by the magnificent fight made by their troops and by the superbly executed Allied retreat, culminating in the successful embarkation of 80 per cent of the British Expeditionary Force, together with a large part of the French forces.

This demonstration of Allied courage and fighting capacity, even after the Belgian defection, bodes ill for the Germans. Like John Paul Jones, when with his ship sinking under him he was asked to surrender, the Allies can say that they "have just begun to fight."

Belated Economy

Every move toward Federal economy in this period of mounting expenditures for national defense is a net gain. For even with drastic savings plans, plus the increase in taxes now under consideration in Congress, the budget will remain far out of balance.

President Roosevelt is properly surveying the program of expenditures during the next fiscal year to determine where cuts can be made. The White House has announced an aim of saving 10 per cent of the sum appropriated for each agency not connected with national defense. At least the Administration is now working on this vital problem which it had previously ignored.

But cuts thus applied by executive action tend to be at once arbitrary and inadequate. There is danger that any such cut would fall heavily upon Government salaries. A policy of reducing salaries of Federal employes would stand out in strange contrast to the President's request that there be no relaxation in wage rates and working conditions in private industry.

Instead of attempting to apply any horizontal cut to all agencies not concerned with national defense the Administration should have drastically adjusted its spending program to allow for the increased defense budget. It is true that the budget had been sent to Congress long before the imperative need for a sharp increase in armaments became clearly apparent. But even during the last few weeks many adjustments could have been made. The President might well have employed his veto power, as he did in the case of a rivers-and-harbors bill, to stop the granting of subsidies and the financing of improvements which the Nation cannot now afford.

It would doubtless be impractical now to ask Congress to review all the nonmilitary outlays for the forthcoming fiscal year. But some of the least justifiable outlays, such as handouts voted to farmers under the guise of parity payments, could be lopped off. The national security demands a sound fiscal policy no less than protective armaments.

Cooperative Inquiry

The much investigated New York milk industry is to come under the scrutiny of the antitrust division of the Department of Justice acting in conjunction with the municipal authorities. A distinguishing feature of this inquiry is that it inaugurates a new type of cooperation between Federal and local officials in an endeavor to free local markets from alleged trade restraints.

In the past, enforcement of the antitrust laws has been directed chiefly at widespread combinations or agreements in restraint of trade extending far beyond the confines of municipalities. But while the distribution of milk and foodstuffs in our large cities embraces an extensive interstate producing and marketing area, the municipalities served are the center and focus of these far flung activities. Any thorough-going investigation to determine whether illegal restraints of trade exist in such cases should, therefore, be carried on with the assistance of officials familiar with local conditions.

The Antitrust Division of the Department of Justice is handicapped by its limited personnel—a fact that makes cooperation with the local authorities in the prospective milk investigation all the more essential. The department's announcement indicates that it proposes to apply the experience gained in the milk inquiry elsewhere, not merely for the purpose of prosecuting lawbreakers but also as a warning to profiteers that retribution lies ahead.

Assistant Attorney General Arnold has found that the mere announcement of an intention to proceed against violators of the antitrust laws has operated to bring down building costs in various cities. Apparently, it is his purpose to apply similar methods to prevent an undue rise in living costs at a time when wars and threats of war create conditions favorable to profiteering.

To any suitor: If you love a girl enough to tolerate her in your presence when she has a cold in the head, you love her enough to marry her.

A psychologist says, "If a child shows signs of becoming unmanageable, switch its attention." We've heard it called many things but never "the attention."

Overheard: "A psychologist told me to forget himself, but how can I forget something that important?"

'Sissying Process'

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Recently newspapers stated the D. A. R. went on record as being opposed to this country's entering the war in Europe. Many of those women have sons, brothers and husbands in the armed forces. They got their education at the expense of the taxpayers to protect the United States wherever danger threatened.

The other day newspapers stated mothers from some States went before Congress with a plea that their "boys" be spared from being sent to "another war."

Irresponsible women proclaim up and down the United States, "We do not want to fight. This is not our war." So said Norway, Belgium, and other countries, who are now engaged in furious combat, and their civilian population fleeing before those barbarians.

The sissying process of our men commences in schools. Instead of men teachers there are women for boys and young men. When they are ready to go out into the world of men to take their rightful places in the Nation's life they are sheltered behind the skirts of their women, who continue the sissying process.

Having weakened the will of America's men to fight where the battle is, well may America bow her head in shame. Democracy is indeed insecure, and the population. We need our soldiers to fight for our own dear country and hurl east of the Maginot Line those barbarous hordes and spare our country from the conflict on our soil.

On Atrocities

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Recently the President of the United States made the statement to the press the refugees in Belgium and France were being machine-gunned as they fled from their homes. He made the statement with the apparent assumption that this was the regular practice of Nazi fliers.

On May 27 Senator Prentiss Brown made a speech over the radio and he made the same statement as the President. After the broadcast I called the Senator and asked him what proof he had that his statement was true. The Senator told me that he had no proof—he was only quoting the President.

During the past week I have had my radio constantly beside me and during that time I have listened to nearly every foreign broadcast from England and France. During the whole week I have never heard one announcement that refugees were being deliberately machine-gunned by the German aviators.

We were dragged into the last war by stories of Belgian babies having their hands cut off. I wonder if now Senator Brown and President Roosevelt are trying to arouse our emotions to a pitch where we would be willing again to sacrifice American boys in another war? W. O.

"Playing Politics"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am an everyday housewife but I do claim intelligence to do some thinking for myself. I have seen the amount of our defense expenditures in the past cited as showing that "somebody has been asleep, not wasteful." I ask, "Who has been asleep?" Surely not the President? For he seems to be the only statesman in the world (and I do not except those of England or France) who long ago realized the mammoth danger to civilization that now threatens to engulf the entire world.

Could the President four years ago have presented his program to Congress? Could he have gained support to give the CCC full military training? Oh no! There would have been demands for impeachment from those in and out of Congress who play politics instead of practicing patriotism.

The safety of thousands of our workmen in factories for armaments and the speedy continuity of our defense program will be greatly imperiled from espionage and sabotage during the months and even years to come.

Our entire Texas border has no adequate defense. Our immigration laws are too liberal and such that citizens from the totalitarian countries are entering in large numbers at this port.

Can the President go before Congress and ask for power to prohibit these people from entering, or ask Congress to do so? Oh no! There are those in Congress (and out) who would cry, "The President is not neutral! We will offend the totalitarian governments!"

After hundreds of our workmen are killed and millions of dollars of property (armament factories) has been destroyed the Congress will act and some (perhaps many) will say, as Mr. Dewey was quoted in the press as saying about the President's defense program, "The President is right, but he is a little late."

If Mr. Dewey had an adequate defense program in mind why hasn't he presented it in his many eloquent speeches? No, Mr. Dewey is playing politics, like so many of our Congressmen.

Going back to the influx of totalitarians, we know perfectly well that is exactly what happened to Austria, Czecho-Slovakia, Poland, Norway and the other countries long before any serious damage manifested itself.

An emergency regulation could be passed without delay, without debate and stop absolutely this influx of immigrants, "tourists" if you please. NELL M. YOUNKIN.

Need For Congress

The welfare of the United States demands, and fairness to the Chief Executive requires, that this Congress shall remain in session until the President shall formally declare that a state of emergency has ceased to exist.

Members of the Senate and of the House are full-time workers, paid a yearly salary; and are as obligated as is the President to stay on duty.

If a team is to be effective, it is essential that the leader be able to locate each member when he needs him—to know where he is when he wants him. If ever in history there was need for Congress to be and to remain in session, it is now.

Against Alien Bill

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I cannot praise too highly your clear and forceful editorial on the unconstitutional alien bill, which aims to deport Mr. Bridges by legislative decree after judicial proceedings have established his right to live here.

Would it not be ironical if we sought to justify, as designed to forestall the imposition of fascism from abroad, such adoption of the same thing here at home?

Relaxing Neutrality

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial, "Idiotic Formality," which is a criticism of the policy of the Roosevelt Administration (Post of May 31), prompts this reply. As the situation presents itself under the most favored nations' phase of our Neutrality Act, the American national defense program is the loser. The United States Government may proceed with plans to enlarge the country's national defense system by building its own factories—which takes several months' time—for the production of airplane engines, airplanes and other armaments for our own protective defenses. This is the imperative need now that private American industries are under contract to the Allies, which have subsidized most of American industrial plants to furnish them with the first and best armaments, exclusive of any demand from our own Army and Navy departments.

While it is true that the Roosevelt Administration has approved of this private procedure, it has not relaxed in full the controls which would give the American industry the opportunity to make excessive profits and at the same time give them the chance to open their own throttles wide for a complete speed up in the armaments production for the Allied forces. So, while it is true that the Roosevelt Administration is turning itself backward to aid the Allies, it is at the same time trying to prevent the catastrophes which throw the country into an economic tailspin at the end of hostilities.

Moreover, the Roosevelt Administration, as I view the situation, is trying to be preferentially neutral insofar as it may aid the Allies and at the same time treats Germany with some respect without entirely jeopardizing our Neutrality Act and this adding to the high-pressure propaganda for our immediate entry into the conflict.

Your editorial states that Secretary Hull did not go far enough in amending the regulations governing the delivery of American-made airplanes to Canada for transshipment to Britain and France. It seems to me that Secretary Hull has eased the situation greatly, without entirely jeopardizing American neutrality. Your editorial implies that the Roosevelt Administration should permit American nationals to pilot belligerent aircraft direct from the factory, where transfer of title could be made, to the Canadian port of shipment. The editorial gives scant thought to the fact that such an outright gesture of support for the Allies would be a direct and intentional violation of the present Neutrality Act, and as such it no doubt would lead to a "state of war" on the part of the United States. This would be most hazardous at a time when our own national defense program is seriously handicapped by the lack of private industrial production of air equipment and other armaments. It would be a grave injustice to humanity, and a serious blow to the Army, which needs vital equipment for modernized warfare.

Little thought is given to the fact that England and France, as badly equipped as their forces were, could not withstand the death-to-death blow of the Germans. Little thought is given in your editorial to the consideration of Japan or Russia and the part either of them may be forced to play, singly or combined, with the Germans, should the United States be so stupid as to enter the war in our state of unpreparedness through irrational thinking and rash judgment.

Home

It hadn't changed. George knew of course that it wouldn't have, but just to see the house and yard again and all the familiar little things one sees at a glance and inwardly knows about a place he has lived in gave him a kind of inner, secret pleasure he could not have explained. In a world of upheaval and war and death and staggering change, the house was his island of security just as the homes of millions of others all over the world, whether they know it or not, are their islands of security. This was a feeling, nothing more than a feeling, but unexpectedly it made George remember a few words he had once seen under glass on the outside of a church as he was walking by. He had not known until this moment that he remembered the words, but now they were there in his mind: "Thought rules the world." America, he told himself quickly, believes that. It gave him pleasure just to glance at the red brick and old vines and white shingles and green roof of the house that he still called home.

The sun was golden on the grass of the yard, and the square-topped hedge that paralleled the street sidewalk and was as tall as a man at the far end, needed trimming on top.

They stopped the car on the driveway under the maple tree beside which soon the white lawn furniture would be put, and George's mother came out of the house and, one by one, in the manner of families all over the world, she kissed her children and her one grandchild. Then they scattered, carrying their week-end handbags and a little girl's doll carriage into the front hall and on up to their own rooms. At once the house was full of voices, of life again, and the striking of the clock in the den, that George's mother now said sounded too loud to her during the days, was not even heard.

Inside the house it was the same to George as out. Nothing was changed, nothing even rearranged. In the hall two little Victorian "parlor chairs" flanked a walnut table and a steel engraving of Gen. Lee hung over the telephone stand. In the living room were the old carved sofa with the worn yellow-plum upholstery, the Wedgewood pitcher of pink and white, that had come from George's great-grandfather, sitting on a chest of drawers. On one of the fireplace bookcases in a corner of the wall, rested a little Confederate flag. In the dining room a tall glass compote stood on the old mahogany table; the table, as George remembered, had once belonged to his great-great-grandfather in a house called Meadowview.

Looking about him, George realized it wasn't the intrinsic value of any of this that mattered; it could all be reproduced, and many people had finer things. Then he remembered he had always intended asking his mother really to identify these things with dates and the correct names of their original owners in the family, and he never had. Was this because in America the best is always taken for granted? Are we too sure of everything?

Yet even with the house just the same, there was a difference in the family. George's father wasn't there. In a sense, his one grandchild had taken his place, for that, too, is the way with the world, yet now she would never know her grandfather. That night George took his father's place at table opposite his mother, and after dinner some of his relatives came in for a little visit that, over the years without ever actually being named, had become in the houses of all of them a family institution. And then some friends, nearly as well known as relatives, came in, too.

They discussed the President and politics, the war and what it could mean to America if the Allies were defeated, books and plays and movies they had seen. Now and then they fell into friendly argument and fell out of it again. They told family jokes.

Yet even this was not enough, because when every one had gone and the rest of the family was in bed, George went to his mother's room and sat talking with her for an hour.

On Sunday morning they came down to breakfast, dressed or in bathrobes as they chose, at whatever time they wished, and colored Lily did not seem to mind. Some of them had been wakened by the church bell a few blocks away that always sounded at nine. After breakfast, the baby's father took her for a walk up the quiet, shaded street of the little Southern city, the others dressed and sat out in the sun until time for church. After church they all came home to walk around the garden, under the apple trees and grape arbors, and a little before lunch they began to bring their bags together again in the front hall. The morning was gone, but the morning, together with the whole week-end, had belonged to the family.

They drove away in the early afternoon, waving back to George's mother and sister, who stood under the maple in the yard. It had been like this all of George's life, coming home from school, leaving for trips, only then his father had been there, too.

"This is what America is founded on," George thought. "It's a way of living that I hope will last forever." PENDLETON HOGAN.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

Challenge To A. F. L.

THE INTERNATIONAL Union of Stagehands and Moving Picture Employes, which is a vicious racket preying on rank and file American workers, begins its convention in Louisville on Monday. This union is controlled by elements of the new Capone mob or syndicate of Chicago criminals. It is a disgrace to the labor movement and a reproach to the American system of government which, by indirect but irresistible Government pressure, compels decent citizens to submit to its brutal and predatory rule.

The president of this racket is George E. Browne, of Chicago, whose voting power, derived from the large number of members, gives him important influence in the American Federation of Labor and a place on the executive council of that organization. Browne gets $20,000 a year and allowances. He is an associate of criminals of the most dangerous and vicious type and not only associates with such vermin, but appoints them to positions of great power. Helpless under this power, the rank and file are compelled to pay high dues, amounting in some crafts to a 10 per cent income tax on their gross earnings, heavy assessments and fines. In one city the initiation fee reached the incredible and prohibitive amount of $3,000. Officers of subunions or locals have established private rackets by which they have compelled owners of movie theaters to buy equipment and services from companies in which they were financially interested.

OFFICERS of sub-unions also have established a licensing system whereby ostensibly free American workmen have been compelled to pay heavily for work permits, but have still been excluded from union membership, which would give them a theoretical and illusory right to vote. Men in this sub-human, slave category have been compelled to work for nothing when their families needed wages, and turn over their pay to the racketeers in command. Decent American citizens with every moral right to hold themselves above the most casual contact with a man of Browne's associations have been harried from job to job and from town to town and compelled to live furtively and work under false names, like fugitive criminals, in order to sneak a few days or weeks of employment at their legitimate occupations.

First vice president under Browne is John P. Nick, a racketeer whose oppression and extortion provoked a rank and file rebellion in a St. Louis local and gave rise to the celebrated Post-Dispatch contempt case. Like Browne, he runs with thugs.

Browne announced last Thursday that no action was contemplated by the union against Willie Bioff, his personal appointee to the post of international representative, a nonelective office of tremendous power, who is now in jail in Chicago belatedly serving an old sentence for sharing the earnings of a prostitute.

"The only interest I have in Bioff is how ably he serves the union," Browne said.

The actual reason why Browne contemplates no action against Bioff is that Bioff, a common Chicago gorilla, who served in the lower ranks of the old Capone-Nitti hootch and prostitution enterprises, is the real boss of the union, with power of death over Browne. If Browne were to attempt to throw out Bioff or Nick Circella, a stickup man who is another of his appointees, he probably would be killed.

INCIDENTALLY, Browne knew Bioff's character when he appointed him dictator over the Hollywood studio trades and the theater projectionists of the entire country. If he should deny that he knew it, then, however, that would be immaterial, for he does know it now and still he "contemplates no action" against him.

As to the question of how ably Bioff serves the union, the fact is that Bioff accepted $100,000 from Joseph Schenck, who represented the Hollywood employers in labor negotiations. Schenck admits that he conveyed the money to Bioff, using an intermediary for purposes of concealment, but says the transaction was a forced loan and insists that Bioff returned the $100,000. The Government has indicted Bioff for failure to declare the $100,000 as income and pay the tax on it. Schenck also admits that he "put Bioff in the market" and another incident which indicates how faithfully Browne's personal representative served the union is a de luxe cruise to South America on the French liner Normandie by Bioff and his wife on tickets which cost $3,700 and were paid for by an employer with whom Bioff conducted negotiations on behalf of the union. Schenck takes the position that Bioff used his union power to extort his favors. This is a plausible idea, considering Bioff's criminal character and the economic vulnerability of the employers whom Schenck represented.

The Louisville convention of this audacious underworld racket is a conspicuous challenge to the national leadership of the A. F. of L. to drive out some of the rats who have invaded the labor movement and whose sponsor has the effrontery to say that he "contemplates no action" against the vilest of them.

Estimated Capitol Roof Cost $585,000

President Roosevelt yesterday sent to Congress a budget estimate og $585,000 to rebuild roofs over the Senate and House wings of the Capitol in conformance with recommendations of a special oint congressional committee.

The roofs have been declared unsafe by David Lynn, architect of the Capitol, and investigating engineer.

His countrymen, says Vicente Albano Pacis in a special article from Manila, have been shaken by Hitler's blitzkrieg against Holland out of their beliefs in the advantages of independence

New Powers Of President

Unusual powers that the President can exercise over the industrial life of the Nation without a state of war continued to be added to their emergency reserve list yesterday by Administration lawyers.

Officials found more than a dozen latent powers, conferred by old statutes, that could be used to put teeth into orders of the new Defense Commission, or to speed up rearmament on other fronts.

The powers are over and above authority, conferred by the 1916 Defense Act, to requisition factories and take them over if they fail to comply with Government orders.

The following are additional actions the President, or his subordinates, could take in an emergency:

Allow the Army to buy its supplies without competitive bidding.

Control Banking

Forbid the Federal Reserve, core of the banking system, to do business except under Presidential regulation.

Control or prohibit use of gold, silver and foreign exchange.

Embargo products, during a war in which the United States is not engaged, of nations that discriminate against United States products.

Take over power houses, dams, conduits and reservoirs to make nitrates, explosives or munitions or for any other purpose involving the safety of the United States.

Prescribe to public utilities what power connections they shall make, what amount of power they shall generate and deliver, where and how they shall deliver it.

Unlimited Spending

Spend appropriations as fast as he likes, without regard to monthly apportionments.

Issue $3,000,000,000 in greenbacks and take other measures to expand credit.

Suspend the eight-hour day on public contracts.

Forbid transfer of ships to foreign registry.

Revoke charters of Maritime Commission vessels.

Requisition any American vessel.

Control the radio, telegraph and telephone industries.

Require railroads to give right-of-way to Government shipments.

Erect a fort or fortification anywhere, upon written consent of the owner of the land.

Can Shut Exchanges

Regulate movements of vessels in American territorial waters.

Shut national securities exchanges for 90 days or suspend trading in any security for ten days.

Government officials said yesterday there was no intention to use these powers at the present time, but that they were being held in reserve in case of need.

Declaration of a full emergency would be necessary to call them into play, lawyers said. Last September the President declared a limited state of emergency.

Rep. Byron Feted At Silver Spring

Representative William D. Byron (Democrat), of Maryland, candidate for reelection, and his family were feted yesterday by the Silver Spring Women's Democratic Club at a burgoo supper held on the estate of Park Commissioner Lacy Shaw, of Meadowbrook, Md.

Byron, who left a sick bed to make an appearance, was accompanied by his wife and four children, William, jr., Goodloe, David and James Edgar.

More than 150 persons attended the party. Quiz contest prizes were awarded to Mrs. Dyke Cullum and Einar Christianson.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Resistance And Appeasement

they get it, ultimately, from the faith that if they die, they will not have died in vain.

The Allied soldiers, and their peoples behind them, know now that surrender means literally, not figuratively and rhetorically, the destruction of their homes, their laws, their culture, and their altars—and in addition, the death or the exile of millions among them and the enslavement of the rest. They know that at a conservative estimate there would not be room in the British Isles, if they surrender, for at least fifteen millions of English-speaking people: there would be no work for them to do and they would starve. Those who did not die and could not emigrate would live like the Poles and the Czechs under the heel of the conqueror.

THEREFORE, the Allies fight, as they have fought at Dunkerque, as men fight at last when to die is the least of all the evils that confronts them. It is at this point that hope is an elixir, hope which sustains the faith that their sacrifice is not in vain. For if men are deprived of hope, they may still prefer to die where they stand. Most of them will. But in place of an indomitable determination to resist and to make the foe pay the utmost and to mitigate his triumph, utterly brave but utterly hopeless men will come to think of death as a sweet release.

A miracle is necessary in Europe and miracles occur in human affairs when out of the depths of the human soul there are evoked the ultimate and prodigious energies of the spirit of man. The retreat from Flanders is such a miracle, as great as the miracle of the Marne, a miracle that could not have been expected under any ordinary circumstances.

To those who ask whether the American hemisphere has anything decisive to contribute immediately to sustain this resistance, the stupendous events are an answer. This hemisphere can at once contribute hope—the promise that the whole machine power of America will provide these heroic men with the only thing they lack, the weapons to withstand the assault. That promise can be validated by the immediate delivery of what we are now able to supply and it can be guaranteed by a systematic and energetic development of our power. Such a promise will sustain and raise to an even higher pitch among the Allies their will to resist.

THIS BRINGS US to the second great consideration which we must bear in mind, that it is of vital moment to the defense of this hemisphere that the resistance should be prolonged and intensified, and that, if and when it is necessary for the Allies to retreat their resistance shall be renewed again. For let us realize that while the armies and navies and fortresses of Britain and France are the center of their resistance, the whole of the Allied power in the world is by no means engaged in the battles now being fought.

The British commonwealth includes, besides the United Kingdom, five other democratic nations —Eire, South Africa, Australia, New Zealand, and Canada. Each of them occupies a strategic position of the greatest importance to the defense of this hemisphere. Let us remember, also, that the Allied empires—British, French, Dutch, Belgian, and Portuguese—comprise well over a quarter, perhaps very nearly half of the whole population of the globe, and that the question of whether these immense territories and these multitudes of men are to submit to and to obey the totalitarian dictators or are to resist is a matter of the greatest importance.

IF WE APPRECIATE this, we shall realize that even if we take the worst view and say we cannot decisively affect the immediate campaign in Western Europe, still a vital interest remains. It is that there shall be generated among free men everywhere, in the outlying empires, at the center of the storm, among the peoples already conquered, and even inside the aggressor states, such a degree of resistance that the battle in Western Europe cannot be, no matter how it comes out, a final and decisive battle. The world cannot be conquered in Western Europe if in all the other fortified positions beyond the present battlefields there remains the will to resist and there are made available the means to resist.

For ourselves, in order to defend our independence in this hemisphere, it is of vital importance that the fortified gateways to our oceans should not be surrendered, at the very worst not until we have had the time to become formidable. We are alarmed, and with reason, at the unmistakable evidence of the Fifth Column conspiracy in certain regions of Latin-America: that conspiracy can be dealt with in this hemisphere if it is not supported actively from Europe. It cannot be supported actively from Europe as long as the exits and entrances to the Atlantic Ocean—from Greenland to Iceland to Ireland to Britain to France to Gibraltar—are held by the free nations. But if the resistance of the free nations collapses at the gateway to the American hemisphere because men feel that resistance is hopeless, we shall be like a turtle that has lost its shell, and has no time and no means to grow another shell.

WHAT THEN of the question as to whether, if we reinforce the resistance and it nevertheless fails, we shall have intensified the resentment of the conquerors? The answer is that we cannot buy their good will by trying to appease them. We can, however, earn their contempt. All the European neutrals have tried to buy their good will; they could not buy it. Stalin and Mussolini are the only ones who, temporarily at least, have bought the good will of Hitler, and the price was not neutrality, as Col. Lindbergh seems to imagine it, but collaboration in the campaign of conquest. Theoretically, we could have imitated Stalin and Mussolini. If at the beginning of the war we had taken a stand with Hitler, had helped him blockade the Allies by imposing an embargo, had threatened to invade Canada if she entered the war, had seized the Allied possessions in this hemisphere, then we should as his ally run no immediate risk of becoming the object of his wrath.

But since we have been incapable of such treachery to the cause of human decency, or of such a betrayal of America, we must accept the fact that we shall withhold from the aggressors only what we are able to defend. There is a fairy tale of the propagandists now being circulated that Hitler and Mussolini are interested only in "Europe," and that once they win, they will establish a nice orderly systematic Europe with which Americans can do a fat and profitable business. If that is so, why do they organize the Fifth Column in Latin-America and even in the United States? If that were their intention, just how would they propose to pay our impressionable businessmen—will it be with goods manufactured by the slave labor of the Europeans? This tale about trading with a "unified Europe" is the sheerest buncombe designed to confuse the ignorantly selfish among us. For it is as certain as the sunrise that the totalitarian victors will turn at once to Latin-America for the raw materials which they lack—materials which they can obtain only there by bartering their manufactured goods, and later by direct colonial exploitation. In fact, they have already turned to Latin-America.

And if we do not wish them to make a colonial empire of Latin-America, we shall be in their way, and what will happen then will depend on which is the stronger.

METTERNICH SAID after the Battle of Austerlitz, when Napoleon was temporarily master of the continent of Europe, that "Napoleon . . . always marks out his future activity while the public (and unfortunately the cabinets also, for too long) think him occupied solely with the object of the moment."

So it is with Hitler. When he occupied the Rhineland, the gullible thought he would not take Austria. When he entered Vienna, the gullible thought he would not take Czechoslovakia. When he entered Prague, they thought he would not take Poland. When he entered Warsaw, they thought he would not attack France and England. If he enters Paris and London, will there still be people who believe that the richest and most poorly defended hemisphere — namely South America—will somehow fail to interest him?

Alarm In Manila

Independence Doubts

Special Correspondence Of The Post

Manila.

WHEN THE NAZIS smashed into the lowlands, doubt also broke into the fort of Philippine independence. Up to then, the Filipino had refused to take the troubled international situation seriously into account and instead resolutely poised himself to cut loose from Mother Columbia's apron strings in 1946. But the collapse of Holland brought home the inevitability of an altered status quo in the Orient, and the continued Nazi threat to the Allied position has rendered a scramble for Oriental colonies a distinct possibility.

Even former High Commissioner McNutt could not dent the Filipino's self-confidence. The latter was certain that when he stepped out into the Orient in 1946, everything would be peace and sweetness. From decades of repetition, his leaders got to declaiming glibly and eloquently on the glory and honor of independence.

But he woke up to learn that Holland had surrendered to Germany, and Holland possesses territories to the south several times more extensive and infinitely richer in natural resources than the Philippines. If Holland cannot even protect her home base, she cannot possibly protect her outposts. It looked as if the Dutch East Indies had been abandoned and that once more they were to belong to the first comer.

THE UNITED STATES, fortunately, adopted a firm stand. Bluntly, she told Japan that the status quo must be maintained. The colonial government of the Indies bolstered up the American note by announcing that it would temporarily be independent of Holland and had sufficient armed forces to make this intention good should anyone care to dispute it. While admitting economic interest in the Indies, Japan reluctantly lined up with America for the maintenance of the status quo.

But worse may yet come. Both Britain and France have extensive colonies in the Orient, territories that may conceivably be coveted by Japan, Italy, Russia and Germany. For this reason the Filipino begins to ask himself leading questions. If Holland becomes a vassal state, who will eventually grab her colonies in the East? Will it be Germany, or Japan or Russia? If the Allied powers collapse, will America, single-handed, be able to prevent a mad scramble for the unprotected colonies?

All these questions lead the Filipino to suspect that, perhaps by 1946, the Orient may have a new status. By then, new masters may have come, new slaves may have been placed under new yokes. China might have been conquered. The Oriental balance of power may have been wrecked, and an aggressive nation or nations may have declared a field day.

From here, new conjectures inevitably arise. In the event of an Allied collapse, may not Japan feel sufficiently bold to challenge America in the Orient? If the United States enters World War II, may not Japan make hay in the East? If the United States can maintain an Oriental status quo, may it not be with the retention of the Philippines as a strongly fortified base of operation?

IF AMERICA is sufficiently interested in the East to try and force the status quo upon Japan and her allies—and Japan is opportunistic enough to have allied herself with the right powers by then—may not her attempt bring about the long-heralded Japanese-American war? The Filipino has no doubt whatever of America's prowess. She would lick Japan hands down. But he has neither any doubt that in the event of such a war, the Philippines will receive the greatest impacts of battle. For, if Japan can seize the islands, she will have pushed America as far back as Hawaii.

If America finds it necessary to aid the Allies, may not Japan intensify her Oriental operations to the extent of shouldering out not only the Allies, but America as well? Shouldering out America means only one thing to the Filipino: the eventual integration of the Philippine into the Japanese empire.

The last possibility—America's successfully policing the Orient—would seem to offer the better alternative to the Filipino. America would not leave the Philippines, but neither would Japan or any other power be able to come in. By a process of elimination, the Filipino is about to reach the conclusion that, perhaps, remaining under the American flag is the best choice under the circumstances.

The alternatives indicated by the lightning developments in international affairs are not so good: First, a new Orient with new masters at the helm and new slaves under the yoke, a situation in which the Philippines' position would be problematical. Second, Japanese control over the islands, which to the Filipino is not even worth comparing with American control. Thus the Filipino begins seriously to doubt whether independence at this time or in 1946 is advisable. Only an Allied victory in the near future would return to him his old self-confidence.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

"Is it still possible to jump many rungs in the ladder by marrying the boss's daughter?"—From the questions asked by college students at the recent quiz of General Motors officials.

* * * *

Is it still possible? Boys, it is now a cinch. Once upon a time when a business man confronted a future son-in-law he said, scornfully: "You're just looking for a chance to get into my business, that's all!" but today he receives the groom with open arms and a "Well, you did this with your eyes open; it means you'll HAVE to help me in my business, Heaven help you!"

* * * *

Even when the young man first pops the question the magnate's daughter replies: "Are you sure you want to marry me? It means you'll be taken into the firm."

* * * *

"I could refuse to take any position with your old man and live a happy life as a clerk or a golf instructor," argues the boy.

"Father is very set in his way," the girl insists. "He would insist on taking you right into the business."

"Well, if he would promise to give me some minor job away down near the bottom it might not be so bad," the boy reasons.

"No," says the girl, "you don't know popper. He would want his daughter's husband to have an important position away up at the top. It's terrible."

"I won't stand for it," the boy argues. "You and I have a right to live our own lives our own way. Nobody can force us to have money and high position."

* * * *

"Popper's very unreasonable," the girl argues.

"Just because he had a big business and has been a conspicuous figure in the industrial world is no reason why he should want me to SUFFER, TOO!" the boy shouts.

"But, please, honey, if you love me and want me for your wife can't you be broad-minded enough to take a big position as general manager of the company if popper wants you to?"

"And spend all my life worrying over new regulations, arguing with government officials and appearing before Federal boards!" demands the indignant suitor.

"Popper might turn the whole business over to you in time," sobs the girl.

"Yeah!" cries the young man, taking it on the run, "That's JUST IT."

Education for Our Elders

People are always writing articles on how to bring up children. Why doesn't some one get real courageous and write a book on how to bring up parents?

The other night "Moonlight Serenade" was being played on the radio, and do you know that my father didn't even know it was Glenn Miller's theme song? He doesn't even know what boogie-woogie music is. It doesn't seem to bother him at all.

Non-Belligerent U. S.

By Mark Sullivan

The End Of Neutrality

The atmosphere of Washington today is expressed in a word just coming into use. The word is "nonbelligerency." "Nonbelligerency" supplants "isolation."

"Isolation" as a definition of American policy is as obsolete as antislavery, or union, or any other word applying to issues long passed. Hardly any person in any branch of the Government, or in either party, thinks that America can practice that degree of immunity from the war which was implied by the word "isolation" as that word was used a year ago.

With isolation goes neutrality, into the limbo of discarded words.

The apprehensive, almost neurotic wish for immunity from war which, one to five years ago, led to enactment of extreme neutrality measures, measures which aimed to achieve immunity from war by tying our own hands—that, too, is gone. America is not neutral. This Government is not neutral, save possibly in some esoteric legal sense. If neutrality means equal willingness to see either side win, then neutrality as a definition of America's attitude is absurdly false.

True, there is no intention of immediate or early change of the existing neutrality laws, or of any other measure which prevents help, to a limited degree, for the Allies. It happens that the things which the neutrality law prevents our doing are not things which, at this time, are greatly needed by the Allies.

THE NEUTRALITY law prevents our sending merchant ships to Allied ports, to carry supplies to them or for other purpose. But the Allies, at this time, do not need our merchant ships. They have abundance of their own. Britain today has more merchant ships than at the beginning of the war, due in part to her acquisition of ships formerly belonging to Denmark, Norway and former neutrals conquered by Germany.

The neutrality law prevents our selling supplies to the Allies on credit. To the same effect, the neutrality law, and also the Johnson law, prevents American citizens or corporations from loaning money to the Allies. But here again the Allies, at present, do not need loans or credit. They have funds with which to pay cash for all they will want or can use for some time.

The limitation on our providing the Allies with what they need is a limitation not of law but of facilities. The Allies need airplanes, need them desperately. They are going to get substantially all the airplanes America can make, as fast as we can make them. Our airplane manufacturers are instructed not to let orders for our own Government stand in the way of filling orders for the Allies.

OF AIRPLANES already in existence, our Army and Navy possess a considerable number which would be of immense value to the Allies at this time—airplanes in their terrible and imperative need. For our Government, as a government, to present or sell airplanes to the Allied governments would probably be an act of war. To take that step at this time, we are reluctant. It has been suggested that our Government might "trade in" the existing planes to manufacturers, as payments on account, so to speak, of planes to be manufactured for our Government at a future time. This would put the existing planes into the hands of private owners, who would be free to sell them to the Allies.

This disposition to get these existing planes owned by our Government into the hands of the Allies is strong. A specific proposal to do this was made by Senator Pepper, of Florida, some days ago. The proposal was rejected by a Senate committee, by a vote of 11 to 1. This reflected reluctance of the Senators to take a step which might be regarded as a definite breach of technical neutrality. If any way can be found to get the planes into the hands of the Allies without too flagrant violation of neutrality, the disposition to do so is strong.

Another need of the Allies, not so familiar to the public but realized by technical persons, is destroyers. While Britain has an immensely powerful navy, she could make use of more vessels of the destroyer class. If Germany undertakes to invade Britain by sea, the easily mobile destroyers would be useful for defense. Here again the limitation is not one of law but of facilities. Britain is free to buy all the destroyers that American ship builders can make.

THE WORD "nonbelligerent" as a description of America's attitude almost coincides, though not quite, with the attitude of Italy toward Germany. Italy's willingness to help Germany includes, presumably, willingness to use her army. That is farther than America contemplates going. That we should never send a conscripted army to Europe remains a fixed part of our policy. But, short of that, whatever we can do for the Allies, it is our wish to do.

The whole gamut of steps short of sending a conscripted army abroad would include use of our Navy to aid the Allies. About that there might still be some question. Yet the objection to sending a conscripted army abroad would not extend, fully, to use of our Navy to help the Allies. The Navy is a professional fighting force made up of men who enlisted voluntarily. If the time comes when it could help the Allies, probably we will be willing to let it. America is headed, powerfully, toward a program of doing everything to help the Allies short of sending a conscripted army.

Senator King Quits Bentley Inquiry; McCarran Head

Senator King (Democrat), of Utah, yesterday announced his resignation as chairman and a member of a special subcommittee of the Senate Judiciary Committee considering the renomination of Fay Bentley as judge of Juvenile Court.

While Senator King explained that the pressure of other duties necessitated the action, it is known that the Utah Senator has not been pleased at the appointment.

Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, who succeeds King as subcommittee chairman, said he will hold a brief hearing within a few days. Several requests for an opportunity to be heard have been received by the subcommittee. Judge Bentley's renomination, which had the support of Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, has been pending at the Capitol since May 6.

New Juvenile Court Building Approved

A group of District officials yesterday expressed whole-hearted approval of Washington's new $550,000 Juvenile Court Building at Third and E streets northwest, after making a tour of the structure.

The building is designed as a companion to the United States Court of Appeals and will be ready for occupancy July 1.

In the delegation inspecting the building yesterday were Maj. Patrick H. Tansey, Assistant Engineer Commissioner; Judge Fay Bentley, of the Juvenile Court; A. W. Crossley, chief engineer of the District PWA office; Capt. John L. Pearson, Assistant Engineer Commissioner, and A. G. Hutson, chief of the construction division of the municipal architect's office.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Girl Is Troubled and Shamed by Feeling That She Is Mentally Superior to Fiance; Should They Marry?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a girl of 23. I graduated from a woman's college last June and am attending a secretarial school at present. I have been engaged for nearly four months to a boy who is younger than I—just completing his freshman year at a university. We have wonderful times together, and many common interests.

However, more and more frequently, when I am not with him, awful misgivings overwhelm me about the doubtfulness of our marriage's being a success. I feel my accidental educational superiority more than I like to confess, and because of this I am unable to look up to him as the most wonderful man in all the world.

On several occasions, I have tried to convey some idea of my uneasiness to him; have tried to make him see that this makes an unsound basis for marriage. But each time he has refuted my attitude with plausible arguments. And I, dreading the prospect of hurting him by seeming disloyal, have thrown the whole matter to the winds and declared my love anew.

But away from him and alone at night, the uneasiness returns with increasing force. It torments me. It makes me wonder whether my love is real. I long to wake up and find that I do not know more than he does. Even the merest suspicion of my feelings on the subject, and the fear that he might lose me, upsets him cruelly.

I have no right to let this indecision go on. It is wrecking him, and I realize fully that it is my fault. Please help me to arrive at a definite solution. Tell me—is it right for me to fulfill my vow to marry him, even though it may mean I will be constantly fighting envy of my friends whose husbands are established business or professional men? Will I ruin all chances of his future happiness, as well as mine, if I break the engagement now? Am I being simply selfish in expecting too much of him? Or are my misgivings and lack of faith proof that my love is incomplete and therefore not a worthy foundation for marriage?

F. B. D.

Respect Misgivings; Break the Engagement

DEAR F. B. D.: How one feels about the person one supposedly loves, when apart from him, is the exact measure of one's basic regard for him. Thus, your misgivings about this boy's suitability to be your husband,—which irresistibly overcast your mind when you are released from the spell of his personal presence,—plainly tell that it would be a tragic mistake to "fulfill your vow" to marry him.

After all, an engagement-to-marry is by no means a binding pledge. It is, at best, only an option which two romantically bemused persons have taken on each other's time and affections; it is a tentative preface to a possibly permanent contract. Its fundamental purpose is to give the affianced partied reasonable time and appropriate opportunity for discovering whether they really do complement each other—in qualities of mind, spirit and emotion—to the extent that they could be contented partners in the long (and never easy) haul of marriage.

Your engagement has served its purpose, in uncovering the fact that you simply cannot respect this importunate stripling, despite the intensity of your infatuation. It is doubtful if his lesser education is primarily responsible for that intellectual disparity that so embarrasses and disturbs you. More likely you are, and always would be, a more "seasoned" character than he; and it is also probable that there is,—as would naturally follow—an overdose of the maternal in your emotional investment in him. This would explain why you find it so difficult to "hurt" him, as you necessarily would in downrightly declaring, and acting in accordance with, your heartfelt conviction.

But don't permit saccharine sentimentality to betray you into letting a weakling make your most crucially important decisions for you. You have your own life to live, according to the design that best fits your nature, insofar as yo uare able—by the exercise of intelligence and strength of character—to bring that design into existence. And he must assume responsibility for creating his happiness out of what materials he can muster.

In my opinion, he is behaving in a manner that is both unfair and unmanly, in letting you see that he is "cruelly upset" by your repeated efforts to be altogether honest about your "uneasiness." He is acting the part of the coward. His plausible arguments are but evasive retreats from latent truths,—which he is unwilling to face; but which he must face some day. The reckoning which would inexorably come after a marriage made on so "unsound" a basis as that you depict, would be far more punitive than any that a "broken" engagement would ever inflict.

It is my opinion that you are not "being simply selfish in expecting too much of him;" but that you are, rather, expecting more manliness in a husband than this boy has to give. My advice to you is to obey the imperious dictates of your own nature,—which clamor for conscious recognition night after night,—and terminate the engagement, letting the boy adjust himself to the disappointment as best he can. If he can't take the blow standing, he is a pretty weak sister; and the pangs he may suffer cannot be rightly attributed to you. Because, had he been more of a man, he might easily have held you.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Personalize Your June Wardrobe

Often the little accessory touches can turn mousey clothes into glamorous ones. These need not be costly, as observe the little crocheted skull cap, sparkling glass necklace and oversized carry-all at right, above. The bag looks big for its money and is really an economy since it fits into any wardrobe scheme. It is natural colored homespun to harmonize with polka dots, stripes or solid toned clothes. At right, the all-white costume is relieved with a splash of color in the embroidered fabric belt, which is washable and has a dark clasp to prevent finger marks from showing.

'Keep-Off-the-Grass' Spotlight Stolen By Virginia O'Brien

New York, June 2.

AT THE season when most our businessmen are supposed to be more tired than usual—and who isn't these days? — Broadway always pushes out a few big girly shows to rest them up, says Deacon Lum Hall, Miss Hughes' personal liability. Few of them, he aers, are piping hot stuff, but they are lively and gay, and the young ladies are dressed for tropical weather.

Madame and I went to the opening of the first of them a few nights back, the opera being called "Keep Off the Grass." A crowded house of tired members of cafe society jammed the large theater, and applauded, in a genteel way, the comedy efforts of Jimmy Durante, The Young Man With the Horn, and the dancing of Ray Bolger. Lanky Ilka Chase wastes her high comedy talents on mediocre material, and lovely Jane Froman sings most of the songs, and right pretty, too.

But every lucky show has one newcomer who ties up the proceedings and stops it colder than an elder's nose. This one has a horse shoe, and comes up with a 19-year-old baby doll out of Los Angeles named Virginia O'Brien. She projects something absolutely new, and the delighted customers, startled at finding such freshness in a pretty routine opus, spatted its hands and pounded its walking canes until she sang another chorus.

The Gentler Sex

By MALVINA LINDSAY

Today, on the eve of the hotly contested election for president of the Do Something About It League, both sides are claiming victory by "substantial majorities." Following are final preelection statements from leaders on both sides:

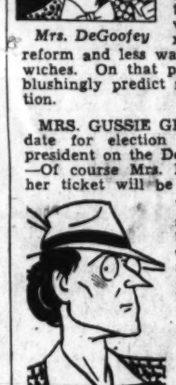
MRS. HENRIETTA DeGOOFEY, candidate for reelection as president—I am certain I have the election in the bag. Despite my opponents' wholesale efforts at vote buying, I am sure the voters in the league will put principle above gadgets and go to the polls tomorrow and return me to office. What this country wants and needs is more reform and less watercress sandwiches. On that platform I unblushingly predict my own election.

Mrs. DeGoofey

MRS. MARMADUKE WADD, opponent of Mrs. DeGoofey for president of the league—I am confident that the forces of right and decency will triumph tomorrow and that I will restore the league to sane leadership. However, my supporters are taking no chances and are making a final checkup of voters and distributing small election souvenirs, such as compacts, lapel gadgets, nylon stockings, indelible lipsticks, canape trays, and diamond-studded toothpicks.

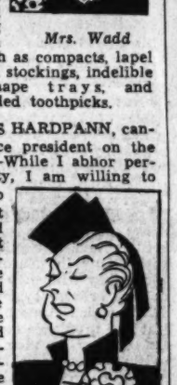
Mrs. Wadd

MRS. GUSSIE GIMLET, candidate for election as first vice president on the DeGoofey ticket—Of course Mrs. DeGoofey and her ticket will be elected. The voters are not such fools as to put a bunch of stuffed shirts in office at a time like this. Another thing, half of the voters on the other side won't be able to get to the polls tomorrow as they will be detained with their masseurs, hairdressers, doctors, etc. This election will never be won in a Turkish bath.



Mrs. Gimlet

MRS. SILAS HARDPANN, candidate for vice president on the Wadd ticket—While I abhor personal publicity, I am willing to be quoted to the effect that Mrs. Wadd and her ticket have the support of the leading and representative women of the country and will undoubtedly meet success at the polls. At a time like this we need conservative women of the standing and caliber of Mrs. Wadd, and all true Americans will support her.



Mrs. Hardpann

PROF. BYRON BYSSHE ASPIC, DeGoofey campaign manager—As the only man member of the Do Something About It League and as a pioneer champion of womanhood, I feel assured that Mrs. DeGoofey will be reelected to carry on her great work. Mrs. DeGoofey represents all that is fine, pure, noble, womanly and refined in the opposite sex and her peerless leadership must be continued. This is America's crucial hour. Only Mrs. DeGoofey can save the Nation.

Prof. Aspic

SENATOR HOKEBERRY TWEET, chairman of speakers for the Wadd ticket—I have taken time from my arduous duties as a statesman to support Mrs. Wadd and I predict that her ticket will win by a landslide. Mrs. Wadd is a sound-minded, home-loving, right-thinking woman, and it is high time the leadership of the Do Something About It League was taken from the hands of Mrs. DeGoofey, whom I consider a theorist, an agitator and a dangerous woman.

Senator Tweet

JANE JEEPERS, president of the Association for Advancement—The younger reform element will vote solidly for Mrs. DeGoofey — and elect her. Our association is making a house to house canvass and its members will form a motorcycle squad to take voters to the polls tomorrow. We certainly do not want to "Waddle With Wadd" through a year of large teas, stuffy luncheons and old house tours. We want more and "goofier" reforms.

Jane Jeepers

GLORIA GOOZLE, chairman of junior committee on the Wadd ticket—All the younger set's betting on Mrs. Wadd. She gives much smarter parties than Mrs. DeGoofey and isn't such a drip. The junior branch of the Wadd campaign committee is going to work every minute until the polls close. We're having a dance tonight, a luncheon and cocktail party tomorrow and all our girls will distribute gardenias at the polls in Betty Rose swimming ensembles.

Simpler Coiffures Appear in Paris

New York (AP).—"There isn't a permanent in Paris. All coiffures have been called to the colors, and hair-do is an unimportant detail." That's the news from behind the front.

What does it mean? For one thing, the beauty salons in Paris are closed. That puts women on their own. They've had to take to short hair (very short) or quick substitutes for the experts' hard-to-handle coiffures. That's how the pompadour has come to get its new lease on women's heads.

The 1940 pompadour favors recent hair-dos but apes the pompador of 1900. Those were the days when we piled our hair high over our foreheads in a Spanish moss effect. By 1905 rats puffed up the soft rolls on top or sides and hair was pulled tightly over the ears.

In World War No. I, it was the shingle short-cut that brought new hair-dos. Paris likes short hair now, too. Better still, the French like the twists and swirls of the latest pompadour. They insist on individuality; beauty, too, if possible, but something different regardless.

Lisa Fonssagrives (often called Schiaparelli's most beautiful mannequin) left Paris for New York six months ago. She brought a pompadour, a quaint arrangement of big curls that loose a wisp or so just over the window's peak.

The Diaphragm, Not Your Chest, Needs Exercise

Singer Paul Althouse Gives Tips to Better Posture and Voice

By Ida Jean Kain

DID YOU know that it is your diaphragm that really counts and not your chest expansion? That the way a singer stands has everything to do with the ease with which she tosses off the high notes? That singers practically never contract tuberculosis? Or that many of the top-flight Hollywood stars take daily singing lessons for the sake of their speaking voices?

Well, if you know all the answers you have probably been taking singing lessons yourself. But if you are the average person, working hard to get along and just becoming aware of the additional value placed on a pleasant speaking voice, this little quiz will stimulate your imagination to a practical slant on the singer's training.

You will be in the frame of mind to appreciate this and other information handed along by Paul Althouse, famous both as a Metropolitan Opera singer and as a singing star-maker. And if you can put into practice some of the tips he gives his beginners, you will be a great deal healthier and more attractive.

Diaphragm Needs It

First of all, it is your diaphragm region that needs the exercise and not your chest. The largest part of your lungs is in the lower rib-cage sector. If you constantly think of your chest, you will involuntarily raise it abnormally and hunch your shoulders. Worse than that, you will be in danger of cultivating a "stuffed shirt" posture, and you don't want that. If you concentrate on the proper expansion of the lower rib-cage, your breathing will be much more effective. So will your appearance and your voice.

Pursuing the mechanical details of good posture, we learn from this authority that "the neck should act as a swivel on which the head is held erect, chin level, and in perfect balance." Think along those lines—if you want to ward off double chins and a corrugated throat!

As for the voice itself, Mr. Althouse says, when you speak, don't be afraid to use the lips and to speak with the front part of the mouth—but without letting the jaw become tense. Tension is something to be avoided at all costs. It quickly spreads from jaw to throat muscles and results in a high, strained, unpleasant voice. Self-consciousness is usually the fundamental trouble, Mr. Althouse has found, and to counteract it he has students stretch and yawn—"and you can't stretch your arms up overhead and open your mouth to its full capacity without overcoming self-consciousness to a degree," he adds. After several good stretches, the natural inclination is to take a deep, lung-filling breath, elongate the posture, and face the world with equanimity. Try it yourself! Of course, it works.

Hear it Yourself

If you haven't thought very much about your voice, you are apt to be under the impression that it is very good. But go get a record made of it! You will find that there isn't any comparison between your voice as you think it is and as other people think it is. You can't really hear your own voice. Mr. Althouse points out, because part of it is inside your head and part of it outside! You won't believe your ears when you hear the record! It may be better than you think, but it may also be much worse . . . and in that case, you will be in a receptive mood for advise of the kind Mr. Althouse has given.

Home Music Popular at Parties

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

Music at home, not the canned kind but the home talent variety, is coming back into style. At a smart tea party we went to lately, given by Thelma Strabel, author of bright modern fiction, a pianist played softly all through the afternoon. Another friend, a former opera singer, always has a musical program at her teas; this consists of one or two groups of discriminating, often little known, music, sometimes by a group of strings. Having a wide acquaintance among musicians she has no difficulty in offering musical fare of professional quality.

A neighborhood music teacher who is a popular hostess has one or two of her pupils perform at each of her parties. This is much better entertainment than a long once-a-year recital, for it lends variety to the usual routine of a tea yet never becomes monotonous.

Another well-known hostess has each year a series of musical evenings, planned far in advance, in which she presents various musically interesting programs given almost entirely by local talent. Last winter an evening of French music, another of German, another of Russian and so on were worked up by different musicians around town. This summer she is planning several garden parties, each to have different national folk songs done in costume. No wonder invitations to her parties are coveted!

Maryland Writer Tells How Paris Apartment Shook As German Dropped Bombs 'Almost in the Front Yard'

Burning Buildings And Craters in Street Are Described

Editor's note: William J. Humphreys, native of Salisbury, Md., and a member of the Associated Press staff in Paris, today got a Parisian's eye view of a modern air bombardment.

By William J. Humphreys.

Paris, June 3.—The sirens across the river from where I live began wailing at 1:20 p. m. (7:20 a. m. E. S. T.) today and the thunder of the first exploding bombs was heard ten minutes later.

My Polish maid, Anna Maiarz, who used to live in Massilon, Ohio, rushed in and shut all the windows.

Then shee gathered together a few possessions and hurried to the air-raid shelter in the basement.

Then the bombing began in earnest. For more than half an hour the bombardment kept up steadily, bombers circling around (here one word censored) suburbs.

None fell nearer than a block away, however. (Eight words censored).

(Fourteen words censored) Four of the wounded, none of whom was hurt seriously, were treated at (one word censored) hospital, directly across the square from where I live.

Among those in the hospital was Mrs. Maurice Dalva, an American, of New York City, who gave birth Sunday morning to a daughter. She was not hurt.

Before I could get dressed and get downstairs to an air-raid shelter, the building shook from terrific explosions almost in the front yard. Windows in our building were shattered but ours withstood the blast.

Edwin Plitt, second secretary of the American Embassy, who lives next door, said he saw stones bounce off his car. He watched the bombing from behind steel shutters with smoke drifting in through the air holes.

Ambulances and fire engines streamed across the bridge near my house. The bridge was not damaged although bombs fell near both ends.

I could see the material damage done at one factory where it was reported that there were dead and wounded inside. But the blaze kept rescue workers away.

British Killed Allies, Nazis Say

Berlin (Tuesday), June 4 (AP).—British fliers killed more than 30 Frenchmen when bombs were dropped Sunday on a railway bridge and highway near Gravelines, near Dunkerque, while the passages were being used by French prisoners and civilian refugees, D. N. B., German news agency, charged today.

200 I. R. A. Suspects Seized by Police

Dublin, June 3 (U.P.).—Police seized more than 200 suspected members of the outlawed Irish Republican army in raids conducted throughout Eire today.

In Dublin soldiers are posted 24 hours a day behind sandbag barricades guarding public buildings. Workmen are erecting barricades against airplanes landing in Phoenix Park, and also at Gormanstown, a British airdrome during the last war.

Ciano Reported Ready To Join Air Squadron

Rome, June 3.—According to reports tonight, Ettore Muti, secretary general of the Fascist Party, and Foreign Minister Count Ciano, as well as Premier Mussolini's sons, Bruno and Vittorio, are about to join their flying squadrons. Muti is said to have received the command of a squadron of 36 planes and Count Ciano that of La Disperata, which has as its emblem a skull and crossbones painted on the fuselage.

Athenia Refugees Sue Ship Co. for $1,200,000

New York, June 3 (INS).—Suit for damages aggregating $1,200,000 was filed in United States District Court today against the Donaldson-Atlantic Line by 300 survivors of the refugee ship Athenia, sunk off the coast of Ireland at the outset of the European war. The complaint declared overloading, an untrained crew, and absence of lifeboat drills made the vessel unseaworthy when it left port.

Col. Johnson Takes ICC Oath

sentiments violating "their deepest religious convictions."

The case revolved around the expulsion of two children from a public school in Minersville, Pa., for their conscientious refusal to take part in the daily ceremony of saluting and pledging allegiance to the flag. The children, aged 12 and 10, were members of the Jehovah's Witnesses sect, which believes that the Bible forbids any such mark of homage. Denied a free education, the children were forced to go to a private school.

In sussining the right of the State to insist on the salute in public schools, Justice Frankfurter declared that the educational process may be used to foster national unity "so long as men's right to believe as they please, to win others to their way of belief, and their right to assemble in their chosen places of worship for the devotional ceremonies of their faith are all fully respected."

The courtroom, said the former Harvard Law School professor, "is not the arena for debating issues of educational policy." If the Court were to try "to choose among competing considerations in the subtle process of securing effective loyalty to the traditional ideals of democracy while respecting at the same time individual idiosyncrasies," it would become "the school board for the country," he said.

Stone Cites Reasons

But Justice Stone in his lone dissent—while agreeing that "constitutional guarantees of personal liberties are not always absolutes"—declared that "it is a long step, and one which I am unable to take, to the position that Government may, as a supposed educational measure and as a means of disciplining the young, compel public affirmations which violate their religious conscience."

"Even if we believe that such compulsions contribute to National unity," said Justice Stone, "there are other ways to teach loyalty and patriotism which are the sources of national unity, than by compelling the pupil to affirm that which he does not believe."

Justice Frankfurter admitted that this type of case puts "the judicial conscience to its severest test." And "because in safeguarding conscience we are dealing with interests so subtle and so dear, every possible leeway should be given to the claims of religious faith."

But, he pointed out, "the mere possession of religious convictions . . . does not relieve the citizen from the discharge of political responsibilities."

The Court, which adjourned yesterday until October, agreed to the Government's petition to test the constitutionality of the wages and hours law and agreed to review a conviction of the Los Angeles Times for contempt of court for a series of editorials.

Acacia O. E. S. Meets

U. S. Will Train 75,000 as Fliers

visaged by President Roosevelt, which will be capable of maintaining a permanent reservoir of 150,000 military pilots, encompasses:

A ground school course of 72 class-hours and primary flight training of 35 to 50 hours for 45,000 youths between the ages of 18 and 26. Last year's age limit was 19 to 25 years. The Army and Navy age limits are 20 to 27 years.

About 85 per cent will be college students to meet Army and Navy air force requirements for two years of college training.

Standardized flight training for 3,000 or more instructors.

Twenty-five hours of "refresher" training for 5,000 active and inactive commercial pilots under the age of 35 or 40.

Fifteen hours of "refresher" training for 7,000 private pilots.

Twenty-five hours of "refresher" training for 5,000 "solo" pilots, who have received enough instruction to solo, but have not been able to accumulate sufficient flying hours to receive a private license.

Fifteen hours of "refresher" training for the 10,000 youths who completed last year's primary training course, and for 15,000 youths who will complete primary training this year and will not be absorbed in secondary C. A. A. training programs.

45 Hours for 9,000

Secondary training of 45 hours for 9,000 youths who have completed the initial C. A. A. course. These 9,000 will possess a minimum of 80 hours in the air. This, Hinckley said, is equivalent to the Army and Navy's primary instruction stages of 65 and 72 hours respectively.

Hinckley said that this will result in a great saving for the armed forces and will step-up their pilot production enormously. The Army and Navy, he said, "wash-out" 50 per cent of their trainees, almost all in the primary stage. He added that 90 per cent of those enrolled in the C. A. A. secondary courses have expressed a desire to enter military aviation.

The summer training program, beginning June 15, will see 15,000 new pilots trained, 1,000 secondary courses given and 1,500 instructors prepared for primary training and 500 for secondary work. In the fall program training will be given to 3,000 secondary pilots and 1,000 primary instructors. The spring semester will see 5,000 secondary pilots trained.

Indies Concern Only Natural, Says Arita

Interest Like That Of U. S. in Mexico, Says Tokyo Official

By the Associated Press

Tokyo, June 3.—Japan has the same vital concern over developments in the Netherland East Indies that the United States has in events in Mexico and South America and cannot remain "unconcerned at any developments" which might change the status quo in those rich islands, Foreign Minister Arita declared today.

The Minister addressed a meeting of the Institute of the Pacific, an organization composed of high military and government officials.

He reemphasized the economic importance of the East Indies to Japan and said it "is but natural that Japan should entertain the most serious concern over the maintenance of the economic status quo there as well as the political."

Although the Indies belong to a European nation, they are intimately linked with the destiny of East Asia, Arita said.

Earlier, Premier Admiral Yonai told newsmen that there is a "way of improving the aggravated relations between Japan and the United States," but that "of course such a method is neither being considered nor being taken."

The premier said he was not in a position to disclose the nature of the way to better relations, but many of his hearers interpreted his statement to mean that Japan did not intend to conciliate the United States by backing down from her policies toward China or on other issues in the Far East.

Admiral Yonai declared Japan feels no "menace" in connection with the concentration of the United States fleet in the Pacific.

Nearly Captured, Gort Expressed Willingness to Die

Copyright by New York Times

London, June 3.—How a German tank column clanked past the very doors of the British headquarters in northern France at the height of the battle of Flanders was told here today by staff officers who have succeeded since in making their way back to England. Among them were intimates of Viscount Gort, now in England, who said that Gen. Gort had made up his mind to die, if necessary, but never to be captured.

"I will be damned if I will let the Germans capture me," these officers cited Gen. Gort as saying. "I am willing to face out the matter of death, but I certainly do not intend to be paraded down Unter den Linden for the Germans to jeer," said Gen. Gort.

sounded, but since it seemed wholly improbable that the Germans would bombard the center of the city of Paris, instead of seeking air raid shelter, we went out on the balcony to see the planes.

"A minute later a bomb dropped on a large field adjacent to the building, about 100 yards from us. Another bomb dropped exactly on the roof of the reception room to which we had withdrawn. Obviously it did not explode. It is now being rendered harmless.

"Heavy bombs fell on all sides of the buildings and we went down to the air-raid shelter amid flying glass and plaster. We were obliged to remain in the shelter for a period of one hour.

"Two cars of guests at the luncheon were struck and burned up in the courtyard at the entrance of the building.

"My car was untouched and I was entirely uninjured."

The department said later it received another message from Bullitt saying:

"I have not yet learned that any American was either killed or wounded in the air raids today."

Americans in Antwerp Safe

All Americans in Antwerp also are safe, according to a report received by the State Department from John Cudahy, the American Ambassador in Brussels. The message was transmitted through the German foreign office to the American Embassy in Berlin, which forwarded it here. Cudahy has been out of direct telegraphic communication with the department since May 16.

At the same time John P. Hurley, American consul general at Marseille, reported that the staff of the consulate were all safe and no Americans were believed to have been injured in week-end bomb raids.

Nye Urges U. S. Shun Power Politics

Senator Gerald P. Nye (Republican), of North Dakota, yesterday declared that the United States should stay out of the "power politics game" in a talk before the Greenbelt Citizens Association, Greenbelt, Md. He urged Americans not to forget the Nation's domestic problems in the current excitement about the European war.

Gen. Holcomb Is Host and Hostess At Marine Compound Garden Party

Wife of Commandant Unable to Attend Their First Scheduled Outdoor Fete Of Summer Because of Sinus Trouble

By Elizabeth Henney

The red-coated Marine Band Orchestra played soft Viennese waltzes in the quiet walled-in garden, bringing nostalgic memories of days when there were no wars . . . guests wandered over the velvet lawn and around old-fashioned flower beds filled with roses, pinks and petunias to the various well-laden refreshment tables set here and there . . . tall locust trees flung their lacy leafry against an azure sky . . . guests in summer silks and linens greeted each other warmly and inquired anxiously about the hostess, ill with sinus trouble and unable to attend but thoughtfully insisting that her guests be entertained just the same . . . and Gen. Thomas Holcomb, commandant of the Marine Corps, "carried on" for his courageous wife and played host and hostess both yesterday afternoon from 5 to 7 at their first scheduled garden party of the summer season at the commandant's quarters in the Marine Barracks compound.

At precisely 5:30 o'clock there was a ruffle of drums and the guests stood at attention while the soldiers marched into the compound for their evening parade. Somehow, watching that parade on the grass at the center of the austere square of barracks and officers' quarters gave one a queer sensation of being on some foreign outpost at the ends of the earth. It was almost impossible to realize that just over the thick brick walls was the capital city, and that the sound of distant bells was in reality the clang of street cars.

The parade over, the flag lowered for the evening and the last notes of the national anthem lingering on the quiet air, the guests drifted back to the garden. There they found Mrs. William Rupertus, wife of Col. Rupertus, who commands the Marine Barracks, passing trays of delicious small cream puffs studded with salmon salad. Mrs. Rupertus, chic, as always, was gowned in a tailored sharkskin frock of white piped in red.

Mrs. Henry Larsen Officiates at Bowl

Officiating at the strawberry sherbet bowl at the other end of the garden was Mrs. Henry Larsen, wife of Col. Larsen. She was gowned in a cool frock of white with eyelet embroidery in deep blue and wore a large brimmed hat of white with a blue ribbon.

Mrs. Blythe Jones, wife of Col. Jones, wielded the ladle of the punch bowl, which was filled with the famous Holcomb punch, a concoction having a base of rum and tasting like nectar of the gods. Mrs. Jones was gowned in black chiffon with white touches. Another punch bowl, presided over by Mrs. Joseph E. Fegan, who was gowned in powder blue lace with hat to match, drew an equally great throng of thirsty and appreciative guests.

Pouring tea were Mrs. Alley Rorex, gowned in a rose and and white print, and Mrs. D. C. Bingham, who wore a navy blue chiffon with matching accessories.

Seemingly in seven places at once, and tending to the needs of all the guests as well as marshaling the tea and punch assistants, was Mrs. Jack Juhan, wife of Capt. Juhan who is aide to Gen. Holcomb. Always one of the prettiest women at any gathering, Mrs. Juhan looked like a Romney portrait yesterday afternoon in a frock of powder blue embroidered in pastel shades, and wearing an enormous cartwheel leghorn picture hat.

Mrs. George Marshall Among Early Arrivals

Others assisting during the afternoon were Mrs. Ben Morreell, wife of Admiral Morreell; Mrs. Chester Nimitz, wife of Admiral Nimitz; Mrs. W. W. Davies, Mrs. William E. Burke, Mrs. R. C. Keyser and Mrs. E. J. Mund.

Among the early arrivals were Mrs. George C. Marshall, wife of Gen. Marshall, Chief of Staff of the Army, and Mrs. Harold R. Stark, wife of Admiral Stark, Chief of Naval Operations. Mrs. Stark, who was gowned in a red and white print, was accompanied by Mrs. E. B. Mulligan.

Quite a center of attention was Admiral Lais, Naval Attache of the Italian Embassy. Signora Lais did not accompany him. Having arrived in Washington Sunday, "she is busy making fixed the house," explained the admiral. A new house it is, for they have just leased 2305 Bancroft place, and, according to the admiral, since it has a garden, they will have garden parties, too, later on.

Signora Lais, who returned to this country from Italy on the Conte de Savoie, landed in New York on Friday. She spent the week-end visiting her parents, Dr. and Mrs. George Evans in New York City.

Other diplomats included the Japanese Ambassador and Mme. Horinouchi and the Naval Attache of the Peruvian Embassy, Capt. Enrique Labarthe and Senora Labarthe.

A large contingent of residential Washington was included among the guests, as well as officials. Heading the official list were the Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Edison and the Assistant Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Lewis Compton.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Grant Meem were among the early arrivals, as were Mrs. George Barnett and Mrs. Buchanan Merryman. Mrs. John (Ma) Williams stopped in for a bit as did Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Wilson and their daughter, Miss Mary Wilson.

Maj. Gen. and Mrs. W. D. Connor and Rear Admiral and Mrs. George T. Pettengill were among the service group, and Debutantes Isabel and Marjorie Meuser were accompanied by their cousin, Arthur Bradley Campbell.

Others noted during the afternoon included Mrs. Stanley K. Hornbeck, Mr. and Mrs. J. Lawrence Houghteling, Mrs. Eldridge Jordan, the Naval Attache of the Brazilian Embassy, Lieut. Comdr. Olavo de Araujo, and Mme. Araujo; Rear Admiral and Mrs. John Downes, Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Dempsey, and Miss Leanna Allen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Allen, of Denver, Colo. Miss Allen, who has just graduated from the Fairmount Junior College, is visiting her cousins, Col. and Mrs. Henry Larsen, at their quarters in Marine Barracks.

Howry Sisters Give Party

At a farewell-for-the-summer party, the Misses Elizabeth and Mary Howry entertained a number of their friends yesterday from 6 to 8 p. m. They have leased their Georgetown home for the season and will leave on Saturday for Saugatuck, Conn., where they will visit Mr. and Mrs. William Phelps Eno for a few days. Miss Mary Howry will give a dance recital at Westport early next week and then will go on to her farm in Massachusetts for the remainder of the summer. Miss Elizabeth Howry will stay with the Enos until early in July. Her plans from then on are indefinite.

Yesterday's party centered in the spacious dining room, where a variety of cocktail-time dainties were served, and on the porch overlooking a nicely groomed lawn. Receiving informally, Miss Elizabeth Howry wore a print frock, cut on simple lines, while her sister had on a white sports dress.

About 100 guests called during the two hours the party was in progress, and many stayed on after 8 o'clock. Among those present were Mme. Ertegun, who arrived with Mme. Hurban; Mrs. Paul V. McNutt, Mrs. McCeney Werlich, Mrs. Buchanan Merryman, Arthur Bradley Campbell and his debutante cousins, the Misses Isabelle and Marjorie Meuser; Lady Chalkley, Mrs. George Maurice Morris, Miss Lydia Loring, Countess Cassini, Fred Roy and Mrs. William Livingston Crounse.

Center of special attention was Lynch Luquer, who had just been presented with the decoration of the Legion d'Honeur by the French Ambassador, Count de Saint Quentin. The latter gave the award earlier yesterday at a garden party in honor of the Alliance Francaise, and many came on to the Howry party from the French Embassy. Mrs. Laurence V. Benet was in that group, as were several others. Still more social notables at the Howry fete were Mrs. Emerson Howe and her daughter, Mme. Gonzales Prada; Mrs. Wilbur Carr, Mrs. Sherman Miles, Mrs. Carlton Holdrege, Miss Dorothy Tirrell, Mrs. William Barrett Ridgeley, Mme. Lombard, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Grant Meem, George Williams and many, many more.

Mrs. Murphy Guest Of Mrs. Naughten At Bridge Luncheon

Mrs. Edward A. Murphy, wife of Lieut. Col., Murphy, U. S. A., was the guest of honor at a bridge luncheon given yesterday at the Mayflower by Mrs. James C. Naughten. Mrs. Albert Wick, the former Miss Beatrice Coughlin, of Washington, was here for the luncheon from Philadelphia and will entertain with her husband, Capt. Albert Wick, U. S. A., for Col. and Mrs. Murphy when they visit Philadelphia this week en route to West Point for the graduation of Edward A. Murphy, jr., from the academy. Mrs. Robert E. Coughlin, wife of Capt. Coughlin, U. S. A., was among Mrs. Naughten's luncheon guests.

Pink and white peonies were used for table decorations with pink roses strewn on the cloth. Luncheon was served in the presidential dining room, the company proceeding from there to one of the hotel suites for bridge.

a rose beige lace frock, street length, with a hat and accessories of off-white, and a corsage of orchids. Both she and Mr. Girvan dispensed with attendants.

The couple will leave today for Santa Barbara, Calif., where they will make their home. Mr. Girvan, who has been serving as designer for the Civic Theater here, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Girvan, of that city.

The bride was graduated from Stoneleigh College, Rye, N. Y. Mr. Girvan is an alumnus of the Dean School in California and the Santa Barbara Teachers College. He also attended the Yale University Drama School.

Miss Coates Weds Ensign Surface

News has been received here of the marriage on Sunday in Coronado, Calif., of Miss Wilda-Anne Coates, daughter of Shelby R. Coates and the late Mrs. Coates, of Tacoma, Wash., to Ensign Henry E. Surface. The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Harold Scofield Betts, of Chevy Chase and the late Henry Earl Surface and is a graduate of the United States Naval Academy, class of 1938.

Ensign and Mrs. Surface will remain on the West Coast.

Jeanne Hansen Becomes Bride

In the presence of relatives and close friends Miss Jeanne Hansen, of Denver, daughter of Mrs. Charles Hansen, of that city, and the late Mr. Hansen, was married yesterday morning to Frank B. O'Mahoney, son of Mrs. Daniel J. O'Mahoney, of Summit, N. J., and the late Mr. O'Mahoney. The bridegroom is a nephew of Senator and Mrs. Joseph C. O'Mahoney, of Wyoming, who entertained at a breakfast after the ceremony.

The marriage took place at 9:30 in St. Paul's Church. The Rev. Richard Wall, of Summit, who was a classmate of Mr. O'Mahoney at Seton Hall, officiated. The bride wore white marquisette and lace, with a sweeping train and a fingertip veil of tulle. She carried a prayer book with a shower of gardenias. Her only attendant was her sister, Miss Maxine Hansen, who was attired in pink embroidered marquisette with a broad-brimmed hat of natural straw. She carried a nosegay of roses. John O'Mahoney was best man for his brother.

After a honeymoon the couple will live in Washington, where Mr. O'Mahoney is with the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

Miss Jarman To Be Wed On Thursday

Y.M.C.A. Plans Are Discussed At White House

Mrs. Roosevelt 'Just a Guest' as 24 Map Campaign

Not as an official hostess, but only "among those present," Mrs. Roosevelt was in the company of 24 other guests at the White House luncheon yesterday when plans were discussed for increasing Y. M. C. A. work for Army and Navy groups.

Mrs. Woodrow Wilson was among the guests, as were Mrs. Wright Patman, wife of Representative Patman, of Texas; Mrs. Colgate W. Darden, jr., wife of Representative Darden, of Virginia; Assistant Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Lewis Compton, Mrs. H. R. Stark, Rear Admiral Wat T. Cluverius, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Frank R. McCoy, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Russell Waesche, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Emory S. Adams, Rear Admiral and Mrs. C. W. Nimitz.

Other guests included Capt. and Mrs. R. D. Workman, Harry D. Cross, Mrs. Oliver Harriman, Mrs. Patrick J. Hurley, Seabury C. Mastick, T. A. Rymer, Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt and Miss Eleanor Wilson.

The luncheon followed Mrs. Roosevelt's regular press conference, at which she discussed a variety of subjects touching on national defense and outlined her program for the next few days. This evening she will attend the dance at the Mayflower to be given by 45 State societies for the benefit of the Guidance for Rural Youth project.

A visit to a craft shop near Quantico, Va., is on Mrs. Roosevelt's program for tomorrow afternoon, and the following day she will go to New York. She plans to spend the week-end at Hyde Park, where the President will join her if he can get away from Washington. Also on his tentative schedule is a speaking engagement at Vassar College on Sunday afternoon and a trip to Charlottesville, Va., on Monday, where Mrs. Roosevelt plans to accompany him. If they go to Charlottesville he will speak at the commencement exercises at the University of Virginia. Franklin Roosevelt, jr., will receive his law degree at that time.

Mrs. Roosevelt will receive a group of New Jersey farm women on the afternoon of June 12, and the following morning she will hold her next press conference.

About the Town with DUDLEY HARMON

Jitters Over War in Europe Extends to Capital Cocktail Parties

THE PORTLY, GRAY-HAIRED members of the Mothers' League now practicing with rifles to be ready for parachutists have nothing on local residents. The state of hyper-jitters has even extended to cocktail parties.

"With the world falling to pieces, I guess I can be half an hour late back to the office from lunch," says the stenographer to her boy friend as she orders another cup of coffee.

"Going away this summer?" you ask a prominent matron. "I don't know," she says, "I think I'll stay and enjoy my house. No telling how long I'll be able to keep it."

SOMEONE WAS WONDERING, the other evening whether other nations would send "bundles for America" and roll bandages for us if we got in a war, the way we rush to do for Europeans. The wonderer was comforted by another guest who pointed out that during the Civil War English ladies rallied to help "our boys." But they knit exclusively for the Southerners, as England's sympathy was with the Confederacy.

THE CHARLES LUCETS of the French Embassy have decided that a year is just about long enough to remain separated from one's children. Their two little boys were in France when war broke out and have been in Brittany ever since, with Mme Lucet's mother. Now their parents are trying to arrange their transport back. No easy job these days.

HERE AND THERE: At the Walter Louchheims' cocktail party Mrs. Donald Hiss telling friends that she and her husband have taken a cottage on the Eastern Shore for two months. They will leave tomorrow . . . Two other guests, California bound, were Mrs. Herbert Feis and Mrs. Walter White. They will summer in Santa Barbara.

Others at this gathering included the Edward Burlings, Gerhard Gesell, Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Stanley-Brown and an assortment of popular bachelors.

GLEANINGS FROM A dinner table: Prince and Princess Hohenlohe have about deceded to shake the dust of Washington from their feet and leave town for good. They hope to go to California this summer, but their plans depend on the situation abroad. Princess Hohenlohe was stunning the other evening in a black dinner dress with a high gathered neck and a silver fox cape . . . Attractive visitors over the week-end were Mr. and Mrs. William Coe, of Long Island, who were widely entertained during their stay.

MRS. ROBERT LOW BACON was called to New York by the sudden death of her mother, Mrs. Fannie Murray . . . Mr. and Mrs. Chase Donaldson will entertain at cocktails tomorrow before the last of the Wednesday supper dances . . . Mrs. Lionel Atwill has asked friends for luncheon next Sunday at her home near Baltimore . . . Admiral and Mrs. Pettingill will give a dinner June 15. Mrs. Pettingill plans to spend the summer right here. As a matter of fact, there's no cooler place than her high-ceilinged old house at the navy yard. The Dutch Minister and Mme. Loudon are also planning to spend the warm months in Washington, as, no doubt, are plenty of diplomats.

Wedding Takes Place in St. Paul's, In Alexandria; After Breakfast Couple Leaves for Smoky Mountains

Dr. and Mrs. Frederik Barry Bang, whose marriage took place Saturday at St. Paul's Episcopal Church in Alexandria, are now on a motor trip to the Smoky Mountains of North Carolina.

Mrs. Bang is the former Miss Betsy Garrett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Walton Garrett, of Washington. Dr. Bang is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Axel Bang, of Baltimore.

The couple's departure followed the wedding breakfast at historic Collingwood Inn on the road to Mount Vernon. Traveling, the bride wore a tailored ensemble of white and navy blue, with a corsage of orchids.

The former Miss Garrett was graduated from George Washington University, where she was a member of Pi Beta Phi sorority. Later, she studied medical illustration with Prof. Max Brodel, at Johns Hopkins Medical School and supplemented her work in comparative anatomy with study at the American Museum of Natural History in New York, and with science courses at Columbia University and the College of the City of New York. Since then, she has been affiliated with the department of surgery at New York Postgraduate Hospital and the Macausland Clinic in Boston.

Dr. Bang is a member of the third generation of his family, distinguished in Danish medical annals, to enter the medical profession. He was graduated from Johns Hopkins University and Johns Hopkins Medical School, and will take up his duties as a fellow of the National Research Council at Vanderbilt University, Nashville, in the autumn.

Saint-Quentin Receives For Friends of France

Tears in Eyes of Those Present When Envoy Refers to 'These Hard Hours—But Better Days Will Come'

By Jessie Ash Arndt.
The Post Club Editor.

In a peaceful setting where fountains played and flowers bloomed, members of the Alliance Francaise and other friends of France gathered yesterday afternoon at the annual reception held by the French Ambassador for the alliance of which he is honorary president. A feature of the occasion was the conferring of the Cross of the Legion of Honor on Lynch Luquer, the Washington president.

Count Rene de Saint-Quentin, the Ambassador, as he conferred the decoration, speaking in French, thanked the friends of his country for their confidence in France and expressed gratitude for "our glorious Allies, the Belgians and the English."

There were tears in the eyes of both French and Americans in the company of guests as he referred to "these hard hours—but better days will come. France is confident."

In place of the gayety which the beauty of the garden setting would have invited under any other circumstances, there was a spirit of warmer friendliness and the closer bond of sympathy and understanding that grows between friends in a time of need.

Among those present were Dr. and Mrs. Laurence V. Benet, who were living in France at the time of the World War, and who were decorated for their war work then. The former U. S. Minister to Czecho-Slovakia, and Mrs. Wilbur Carr also were there, as were Mme. Boncesco, wife of the financial counselor of the Rumanian Legation; Dr. and Mrs. Nelson Darton, Mrs. William B. Poland, Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman, Miss Harriet Winslow, Mrs. Myrtle N. Willis, Miss Marguerite Pelletier, cousin of the French air attache; members of the embassy staff and Mme. Blanche Bimont, who is secretary of the Alliance Francaise and who did valiant work in aiding the French war orphans 20 years ago.

Special guests yesterday were members of the board of the Women's Overseas Service League whose national president is Miss Ruth McClelland. The board members present were Miss Hazel Nielson, president; Mrs. John J. Keegan, Mrs. Virginia Armistead Nelson, Miss Martha Peden, Mrs. Florence MacKay, Miss Anne Singleton, Mrs. Archibald Smith and Miss Hazel Yates—all of whom did their bit in France during the last war.

Also among the guests were the women who have been sewing at the embassy daily for the French children.

Delphians Hear Parole Chief

Wilbur LaRoe, jr., chairman of the District Parole Board, addressed the spring luncheon of the Delphian Society yesterday at Hotel 2400, in which the seven local chapters joined. Mrs. John C. Wright, president of George Washington Chapter, general chairman, presided.

Mr. LaRoe explained the set-up of the board and cited some of the typical cases with which it has to deal. He expressed the opinion that more equal economic opportunities for colored people would help reduce crime in that group of the population.

Also on the program were two-piano numbers by Frances Gutelius Smith and Mabel Anderson Edgerton, of the Arlington Chapter.

Presidents of the various chapters are Mrs. H. B. Linton, Columbia; J. H. Heckman, Arlington; Mrs. H. R. Norton, National Capital; Mrs. Zabel, Oberlin; Mrs. Welton Hutton, Iota Phi Delta, and Mrs. J. H. O'Connell, Kappa Sigma.

A.A.U.W. Passes Bogus Money—For Education

Members of the Washington Branch of the American Association of University Women were passing counterfeit money yesterday— not as legal tender, but passing it around for inspection at their regular Monday tea.

The program, "Know Your Money," was presented by a Secret Service agent of the Treasury Department, M. C. Frost. He showed a motion picture made by Secret Service personnel, with Lowell Thomas as commentator, designed to inform the public on detecting counterfeit money. It was the first time a Government Department has initiated this kind of information to suppress crime.

An informed public, it is believed, will reduce the temptation to counterfeit and will save the public about $1,000,000 a year by enabling them to detect spurious money.

Mrs. William C. Van Vleck, president of the branch, announced the names of committee chairman who were approved by the executive board at its meeting Saturday. There are still a few other chairmanships to be filled.

Those announced include arts, Remington Kellogg, economic and legal status of women, Miss Nelle L. Ingals; education, Mrs. Willard Givens, wife of the secretary of the National Education Association; fellowship, Mrs. David Wing; finance, Miss Madge Lane Cook; hospitality, Mrs. Maris Proffitt; international relations, Mrs. James W. Irwin; junior group, Miss Margaret Cook; legislation, Miss Mary M. Connelly, and publicity, Miss Emily Clark.

A Washington branch of the Alliance for the Guidance of Rural Youth was formed in 1937 by Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, who is past president of the Washington group.

Memorial Trees Planted on Campus Of American U.

Three linden trees were planted in front of Women's Residence Hall on American University campus yesterday afternoon by the Woman's Guild, in memory of the late Mrs. Mary Logan Tucker and Mrs. W. S. Dewhirst, who were for many years active members.

Mrs. R. E. Rapp, president of the guild, presided at the service and Mrs. Fred Evans read the dedication. Both Mrs. Tucker and Mrs. Dewhirst were among the first members of the guild, of which Mrs. Tucker's mother, Mrs. John A. Logan, wife of Gen. Logan, was first president. Mrs. Dewhirst served as treasurer for 28 years.

The tree planting was preceded by a business meeting at Hurst Hall in the morning, at which a Red Cross unit of the guild was organized, and a luncheon with the trustee, who also held a morning business meeting. Dr. Arthur C. Christie is chairman of the trustees.

R. G. Caseys Guests at Tea

The Australian Minister and Mrs. Richard G. Casey were honor guests at a tea given yesterday by the Newspaper Women's Club at the Raleigh Hotel.

The Minister, who talked briefly to the 60 guests, announced he would not discuss the war. Instead, he told of the status of women in Australia, their part in the Flying Hospital service of the country, their achievements in athletics and their activities in their own party organization which corresponds to the National Woman's Party of this country.

Mrs. Casey, who wore a becoming black and yellow print dress and black hat, also made a brief talk, describing some of her experiences as a flier.

Miss Katharine Brooks, the president, received with the honor guests. At the tea tables were Mrs. Gilbert Hitchcock, Mrs. Edwin T. Meredith, Mrs. Fred J. Essary and Mrs. Lucille Foster McMillin. Miss Margaret Hart served punch.

Betty McFayden Returns Home Today After Graduating From Duke

MR. AND MRS. A. D. McFAYDEN return today from Durham, N. C., accompanied by their daughter, Betty, whose graduation they attended yesterday at Duke University.

Betty, who is a member of Delta Beta Chapter of Kappa Kappa Gamma Sorority, specialized in English and psychology, and recently was among the winners in the Vogue styling contest. She also sold an article on styles which appears in the current issue of the College Bazaar. She has been on the dean's list every semester since she entered the university.

She will be home for a time this summer and probably will divide her interest between her study of fashion trends, her writing, and her accordion. During her high school course at McKinley, she was much in demand as accordionist for programs, and at Duke where she played for various benefit performances, she was known as "the girl with the accordion."

PLAN INITIATION — Alpha Lambda Chapter of Phi Delta Delta, legal sorority, tonight will initiate five new members at a banquet at the Roosevelt Hotel. They are Marion Gilmore Strawn, Elsie Carver, Martha Simpson, Nina Bolkhardt and Faye Hanley.

There also will be election of officers. The retiring president is Irene Vivian Wright, who is also business manager of the Phi Delta Quarterly and, in that capacity, will attend the national convention in Portland, Oreg., July 26-28. She was graduated last June from National Law School and has been admitted to the District bar.

Among other Phi Deltas who will go to the Portland conclave are Burmah Miller, delegate from Alpha Lambda Chapter; Mable Ross, alternate; Catherine L. Vaux, international vice president; Katherine Shilling, editor of the Quarterly; Marie Allen, delegate from Beta Chapter; Margaret Heimiller, alternate.

WORLD'S FAIR TRIP — Mrs. Charles B. Sinclair, ways and means chairman of the District Congress of Parents and Teachers, is arranging an excursion to the New York World's Fair for parents and teachers. They will leave Friday, June 14, and return Sunday night.

Mrs. Lawrence Brooks, chairman of the student aid committee, has announced that, although the rooms at Gales School are now closed for the season, members of the committee are still working, putting clothing in shape for the reopening next fall. They also plan to meet Wednesdays for picnics. They have enjoyed working together every week during the season—now they will play together through the vacation period.

LIFE BEGINS AGAIN—Washingtonians who met Anni Voipio, of Helsinki, Finland, when she was here a year ago, will be interested in the message from her in the recent issue of "Widening Horizons," official publication of the International Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs.

Miss Voipio, as president of the Finnish Federation of Business and Professional Women, announces the formation of two new clubs in Finland.

"Our country has suffered severe losses," she says. "The future is dark. But even a dark future has its light points. This is not a time for mourning. We must, with all our power, help to rebuild our country and in this heavy work now demanded of us, we hope also in the future to have the generous help of the entire civilized world which, with such great interest, has followed our struggle."

A gift of $300 from the International Federation was used, she says, to aid members who lost their work because of the war.

Another item of interest in Widening Horizons is the announcement of the election of Lady Astor as the new president of the British Federation of Business and Professional Women.

Tea Is Given For Self-Help Exchange Unit

The headquarters of the Washington Self-Help Exchange at 2529 Pennsylvania avenue northwest, was the scene of a tea given yesterday in honor of the members of the women's volunteer church committee of the exchange. The committee held its regular meeting in the recreation room at 2:30 p. m. and following the meeting members were received by the director, Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, in the yard where tea and sandwiches were served.

This outdoor gathering was made possible by fencing off a small, unused section of the woodyard of the exchange. A picket fence was made in the carpenter shop, painted in the paint shop, and set up by some of the workers; the yard was then sodded by the participants with grass brought from the Self-Help Farm in Self-Help trucks; and finally the shrubbery, donated by friends, was planted by participants with a flair for landscaping.

The women's volunteer church committee has underwritten the woodyard project this year. As a result of this project, participants at the exchange have been furnished with 21,601 hours of work since January 1. During this period, 9,612 pieces of scrip have been redeemed for wood in the amount of 801 loads and 200¼ cords. Fuel wood is important to the participants of the exchange, not only because it provides a source of heating for their homes, but also because it is used by a large number of them all the year round for cooking and for hot water. In addition to supplying fuel wood for the participants, this project gives work to about 40 men a week.

All the wood is donated by cemeteries, real estate operators, and tree serving firms. The participants cut down the trees and prepare the wood for use as fuel.

Under the leadership of Miss Susan Craighill, this committee, in addition to financing the fuel-wood project, has contributed valuable assistance in such phases of work of the exchange as interviewing, sorting salvage, clerical work and distribution of the Self-Help "Thank You Bags" through which members of the community donate the salvag , that furnishes the participants with employment as well as the articles essential to every day living.

The members of the women's volunteer church committee include Miss Craighill, chairman; Mrs. Benham Baldwin, Mrs. Carlton Ball, Miss Lilly Bass, Mrs. Robert Bowie, Mrs. S. C. Brez, Miss Janet Brown, Mrs. J. L. Chambers, Mrs. C. B. Churchill, Mrs. Lake Churchill, Mrs. Emory Cushing, Mrs. Kenton Harris, Miss Mary H. Hobart, Mrs. L. B. Houff, Mrs. Charles C. Kennon, Mrs. Joseph Leverton, Mrs. Samuel Levy, Mrs. Jerome Lyle, Mrs. Jerome Mayer, Mrs. Richard Meyer, Mrs. W. W. Swift, Mrs. J. E. Whaley and Mrs. H. L. Wyman.

High Court Again Denies AMA Review

Ruling Is No Definition Of Medicine, Lawyers Say

Refusing for a second time to review the Court of Appeals' decision on a defense demurrer, the Supreme Court cleared the way yesterday for trial on its merits of the Government's criminal conspiracy case against organized medicine.

While defense attorneys said they had not considered their next move, they indicated it would be agreeable to them if the case came to trial in District Court here. Government attorneys will confer with them shortly to agree on a date for the opening, probably early next fall.

Lawyers said it was yet to be determined what judge would hear the Government's charges.

It was Justice James M. Proctor of District Court who sustained a defense demurrer when the case first came to trial in July of 1929 by holding that the practice of medicine is "not a trade" and therefore those who practice it cannot be punished for "restraint of trade." His decision was overruled by the Court of Appeals, whereupon the defense took it to the Supreme Court.

The high court's decision yesterday marked the second time it had refused to consider the case. Seeking to shorten the procedure after Justice Proctor sustained the defense demurrer, the Government tried unsuccessfully to have the Supreme Court consider his decision before the Court of Appeals had acted.

Yesterday's decision was the most recent of a number of legal moves which began December 20, 1938.

Government lawyers said the decision could not be interpreted as agreement by the Supreme Court that the practice of medicine is a trade. They said it may have been based on one or several points.

Elks' Boys Give Concert

A concert by the Elks' Club Boys Band was given last night at the last meeting of Congress Heights Progressive Citizens Association. More than 200 attended the musical feast, which was held in the auditorium of Congress Heights Elementary School. James Kidwell conducted.

Death Ends Fair Trip

What began as a jamboree trip to the World's Fair terminated sadly in Washington yesterday for John Sweat, 14-year-old Boy Scout from Waycross, Ga.

Young Sweat, one of a truckload of Boy Scouts seeing the town, was located by a scout car from the Ninth Precinct a few minutes after a police radio broadcast.

Scoutmaster of the group, Thad Dankel, was asked to communicate with Lieut. W. H. Thomas at detective headquarters. The worried scoutmaster learned that Thomas had a message that young Sweat's father had just died. The boy was placed on a southbound train to return home for the funeral.

Thieves Ransack Apartment

Valia V. Parma, until recently curator of rare books at the Library of Congress, reported to police last night his home at Dupont Circle Apartments was ransacked and numerous small articles stolen.

Included in the loot was a small amethyst matrix stone purchased from the estate of Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes.

New Change Racket

A thief with a new angle on the change racket last night took Charles R. Bernard, proprietor of a filling station at 5611 Fifth street northwest, by representing himself as a physician and ordering a battery and change for $10 sent to Homeopathic Hospital. When the battery arrived, he took the change and disappeared into the hospital.

Sunday night another service station was victimized in the same fashion by a man who used Casualty Hospital as his plant.

A class of 50 candidates was inducted into Almas Temple of the Shrine at ceremonies at the Mayflower Hotel last night before more than 1,000 Shriners gathered to greet Imperial Potentate Walter D. Cline, of Wichita Falls, Tex., on his official visitation. Three members were received from other temples by affiliation.

The ceremonies followed a parade from Almas Temple to the Mayflower, led by the temple band under Frederick Wilken. Uniformed units included the Drum Corps, William D. Kiefer, director; the Arab Patrol under Capt. Jesse E. Porter; the Oriental Band, led by Frank M. Graham, and the Legion of Honor, led by Foster A. C. Shepard, captain.

Cline, introduced by Leonard P. Steuart, treasurer of the Imperial Council and a past imperial potentate, spoke on the relation of the Shrine to a world at war. Shrine principles, he said, will have important influence in the readjustment after the war and referred to reclamation of crippled children in 15 hospitals maintained by the Shrine.

Karl E. Jarrell, potentate of Almas Temple, recognized numerous Masonic dignitaries, potentates and past potentates of other temples and distinguished members of the Shrine. These included United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage, grand master of Masons in the District of Columbia; John H. Cowles, sovereign grand commander of the Scottish Rite of the Southern Jurisdiction; Senators Connally and Sheppard, of Texas; Gov. James H. Price, of Virginia, recorder of the imperial council, and Everett W. Jacocks, of Richmond, assistant to the imperial recorder.

Past potentates of Almas Temple presented included L. Whiting Estes, Charles D. Shackleford, Robert S. Regar, Edward D. Anderson, Warren W. Grimes, Robert P. Smith, Allen H. Potts, Ara M. Daniels, Cranville Gude, Stanley D. Willis and Steuart.

The ritualistic work followed a brief program during which the band played the "Star-Spangled Banner," Potentate Jarrell led in the Oath of Allegiance to the Flag, Marx E. Kahn recited a patriotic ode and the chanters sang "God Bless America." The patrol marched into the room and formed in open order, through which the Legion of Honor passed and posted the colors.

Ritualists who performed the ceremonies incident to conferring the degrees under direction of Evan Jones included Bruce R. Allen, William P. Amos, Robert B. Bennett, William V. Carpenter, Mishel G. Daoud, Sulaiman Daoud, Arthur G. Fessenden, Marvin E. Flower, Harry Gardner, George L. Goss, Orrin R. Hammer, Donald W. Graffius, William P. Jacobs, jr., Joseph F. Lyvers, Louis Marks, Dr. John C. Too Many Liquor Establishments In West End Now, Citizens' Head Says

Walter F. Wasson, president of the West End Citizens Association, yesterday told the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board "there are too many liquor establishments" between the White House and Twenty-second street northwest.

He urged the board deny the application of the Colonial Coffee Shop for a class "C" license at the restaurant at 832 Twentieth street northwest, which borders Pennsylvania avenue at I street northwest. The association president, who resides at 2107 H street northwest, said he protested the grant of the license "not in the name of the association but as an individual."

Operator Testifies

George Papanicolas, who with his brother Nick, operate the restaurant, testified business had decreased 50 per cent in the past five years due to the grant of class "C" licenses to "several competitors."

The application was vigorously opposed by Dr. John R. Edwards, pastor of the Union Methodist Church, 814 Twentieth street northwest, who presented a petition signed by 130 members of the church and nearby residents.

Mrs. Warren A. Gardner, 2212 I street northwest, chairman of the First Ward Neighborhood Council, and Mrs. Herbert Schrivener, 2210 Pennsylvania avenue northwest, a member of the church, and W. K. Reeve, of the Home Building Association, 2006 I street northwest, also opposed the application.

The applicant has a class "D" license, which permits the on-sale of beer and light wines. On December 30, 1938, Papanicolas requested a "C" license, which permits the on-sale of hard liquor, but was refused due to strong opposition from the Union Methodist Church and the George Washington University.

Zoning Rulings

The Board of Zoning Adjustment yesterday sided with a ruling by the building inspector that the ground floor of a new apartment house at 2420 Sixteenth street northwest is actually the first floor of the building and not the basement, as was contended by the builder.

Under the present zoning regulations, the building may rise eight stories. Col. John W. Oehmann, building inspector, said the ground floor (which he said was the first) must be considered in adding up the total number of floors. Lester Rosenberg, the builder, said the ground floor (which he claimed was a basement) should not be counted in the tally.

In another decision the board denied the application of the Columbia Medical Building Corporation and the Doctors Hospital, Inc., to permit the erection of a ninth and tenth story to the Columbia Medical Building at 1835 I street northwest.

Meyer Siegel was granted permission to establish bowling alleys in the basement of Park and Shop stores on the east side of Alabama avenue north of Pennsylvania avenue southeast.

The appeal of James Stevens to establish a gasoline service station at Bladensburg road and Thirtieth street northeast, was denied as was the appeal of Susan A. and Harriet C. Guffin for permission to change a nonconforming use from an apartment house to a rest home at 500 Dahlia street northwest.

Bishop Hughes Gives Address As American U. Graduates 87

TOP HONOR GRAD—Helen Miller, first woman president of the student body at American University, received three awards from Dean George B. Woods at last night's commencement exercises. They were the College Honor Prize, the D. A. R. History Prize and the Pi Delta Epsilon Award

Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes, of the Methodist Church, in the commencement address for American University last night, asked: "How far can a nationalized 'I' ask for a safe and sane isolation and fail to inject itself into an international 'we' that organizes for a more kindly world?"

Bishop Hughes urged the 87 candidates for degrees to move out from "I" to "we" in their thinking and relationships. He asked: How far can the 'I' of personal liberty stand in the path of the 'we' of social welfare?"

At the exercises in Memorial Continental Hall, Helen A. Miller, of 2800 Connecticut avenue northwest, won the top honors awarded by the university—the College Honor Prize of $50 to the member of the senior class making the largest contribution to the school during her four years; the history prize of $30 awarded by the District Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution, and the Pi Delta Epsilon award. The latter, the honor of having the winner's name engraved on a silver cup, goes to the student who has contributed most to journalism at the university. Miss Miller was first woman president of the student body and editor of the year book.

Laura S. Talbott, 223 Seventeenth street northeast, and Harry Newby, 1827 Jackson street northwest, won faculty prizes of $15, awarded to the man and woman student who rank highest in scholarship.

The Pan-Hellenic Cup, awarded each year to the sorority woman in the freshman class with the highest scholarship record, went to Constance Barrows, 1729 Thirty-fifth street northwest.

The Rev. Ze Barney Phillips, chaplain of the Senate and rector of the Epiphany Church, opened the exercises with prayer.

House Group Plans Final District Day

Six Local Bills Approved; Hearing On Women's Hour Law Tomorrow

Hopeful of getting another District day before adjournment of Congress, the House District Committee yesterday approved a half dozen bills, three of which have passed the Senate, and referred two other measures to subcommittees for hearings.

Chairman Randolph said he will confer with House leaders this week in an effort to obtain assurance that at least part of next Monday will be reserved for a final District day.

One of the bills approved by the committee is the compromise plan for the recording of motor vehicle liens in the Department of Vehicles and Traffic under supervision of the recorder of deeds. Another authorizes the Secretary of the Treasury to fix a low rate of interest for the District's repayment of WPA loans.

8-Hour Day Law Hearing

Amendments to the women's eight-hour-day law were referred to Representative McGehee (Democrat), of Mississippi, and the Judiciary subcommittee. A hearing on the subject was scheduled for tomorrow at 10:30 a. m.

The National Capital Park and Planning Commission's plan for defining the District-Virginia boundary was referred to a special subcommittee headed by Representative Hunter (Democrat), of Ohio.

Randolph said that if agreements could be reached on the bill, the committee may be polled before the last District day. Some opposition is expected, however, against the Commissioners' revision of the eight-hour law.

Committee Approves 3 Bills

The three Senate bills approved by the committee (1) provide for the incorporation of consumers' cooperatives, (2) place Amos B. Cole, former policeman, on retirement rolls, and (3) strengthen the law regulating the engineering profession.

The third House bill reported is intended to allow Mrs. Elizabeth K. Peeples, an administrative principal in the public schools, to purchase credit in the teachers' retirement fund.

President Roosevelt yesterday sent to Congress a supplemental estimate of $8,800, of which $7,700 would be used to buy supplies for the wards nearing completion at Gallinger Hospital as a PWA project. The other $1,100 is to pay claims.

NLRB Dismisses Md. Oil Firm Case

The National Labor Relations board dismissed yesterday a charge of unfair labor practice against the Crown Central Petroleum Corporation, Baltimore, Md., and at the same time ordered an employe election within 30 days at the company's Pasadena, Tex., plant.

Father No 'Forgotten Man'

Faults? Sure, but Response Of Readers Hails 'My Dad'

He Didn't Have to Be 'Perfect;' What We Are After Is Letters Of Those Typical, but Human Men

Whoever "the forgotten man" may be, he is not dad, if the early response to Sunday's announcement of The Post's "typical father" hunt is any gauge.

Many nominations have already been received by the Father's Day Editor, with more than a week to go before the contest ends. Too, there were numerous telephone calls yesterday from persons seeking additional information. Since several of the inquirers seemed to have the idea that the winning father must be virtually perfection itself, let us settle that point right now.

It is a typical dad that is wanted, not the perfect one. The father whom the judges select for the crown may have dandruff on his coat collar, care for nothing but Western movies, snore unmercifully and like to putter around a stove, cooking cabbage.

But he will have his points, too. Maybe a gardener who maintains the handsomest lawn on the block. Or as a parent who understands the kinship that can arise from junior's introduction to a roving mongrel, or vice versa.

He will have his faults, certainly from a child's standpoint, but he will probably be a fellow who takes son to the ball games, remembers that sister does not like to be called Fatty and keeps a straight face when mother tells the census taker she is 36.

So who is your candidate? Whom do you want us to glorify, journalistically speaking, on Father's Day, June 16? Send your nominations to the Father's Day Editor no later than June 12.

Dr. Gamble Wins Sweepstakes In Woodridge Show Third Time

Dr. J. A. Gamble, veteran rose grower of Washington, won the sweepstakes award in the Woodridge Garden Club annual rose and peony show last night for the third time.

Dr. Gamble, who spends more time with his roses since he retired from the Department of Agriculture, exhibited about 50 of the 600 blooms in the show. One of his, "Texas Centennial," a deep pink rose, won the title of "best rose in the show," and another, "Madame Butterfly," a pale pink, was judged third best.

A husband and wife team, Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Hester, were runner-up for the sweepstakes award. Hester, who is an auditor in the Bureau of Internal Revenue, explained how the family team gardened its way to the award, by saying, "I'm the gardener, and my wife's the boss."

In the exhibit of new roses which have been introduced from 1934 to 1940, the Hesters entered several, including "Eternal Youth," pink; "Crimson Glory" and "Poinsettia."

In addition to the roses, about 100 peonies added extra splashes of color to the show in the hall of Sherwood Church at Twenty-second street and Rhode Island avenue northeast. The judges were Richard L. Ruffner, Neils J. Hansen, Mrs. Lomax Tayloe and Mrs. P. G. Nutting.

A. P. Hofmann won the third highest score and a "Crimson Glory" exhibited by him was judged the "second best rose."

The highest score in arrangement classes went to Mrs. J. A. Gamble, first; Mrs. M. C. Kissinger, second, with Mrs. E. A. Clark and Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Hester tied for third.

Highest score in peony classes was won by Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Hester, first; Mrs. Mathilde K. Bartlett, second; Mr. and Mrs. George Targett, third.

Pink roses, foxglove and daisies on a silver tray won for Mrs. F. E. Burgess the first award for best arrangement. Mrs. E. A. Clark, who arranged white roses in a green and white bowl, won the second award, while Mrs. J. A. Gamble's yellow roses in a yellow bowl were third.

Other flower shows will be held today. The Woodridge Club is sponsoring exhibits for pupils in five schools in the vicinity, Langdon, Woodridge, Burroughs, Bunker Hill and Crosby Noyes. These shows will be open to visitors from 1 to 3 p. m.

Hester was chairman of last night's show, with other members of the committee, Mr. and Mrs. G. T. Boul, Mr. and Mrs. H N Foss, Dr and Mrs J. A. Gamble, Mr. and Mrs Nathan Gammon, Mr and Mrs. George R. Goergens, Mr. and Mrs. A. P. Hofman, Mrs F. E Burgess, A G. Davis, Miss Hazelle Johnson, Mrs. Mary Porter, Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Kinner and Mr. and Mrs George Targett.

Alumnae Dinner Held; Awards, Prizes Given At Flag Day Program

Verbal "toasts" to Miss Helen C. Peck, who during the past 33 years has been a virtual mother to several thousand girls while they were in school, were given last night as graduates of the National Cathedral School held their annual alumnae dinner in her honor.

With Miss Peck retiring as provost of the institution, the banquet at the school included testimonial talks by Miss Lucy G. Wright, of Bethesda, Md., president of the Alumnae Association, and Mrs. Marshall Lynn, of Alexandria, Va. There was as much of a response as Miss Peck could muster through a choked throat.

As provost of the school, Miss Peck has been in charge of all personal activities of students.

The alumnae dinner was part of commencement festivities in celebration of the school's fortieth anniversary.

Awards and prizes were presented yesterday afternoon at the annual Flag Day services. According to tradition, the flag which has flown over the school during the year went to the girl adjudged the most outstanding senior. It was presented to Miss Peggy Tuckerman, daughter of Walter R. Tuckerman and Mrs. Tuckerman, the first graduate of the school.

Other awards made and to be made are:

Hyde prize for excellence in written and spoken English, to Miss Louise Catherine Rigss, daughter of Rear Admiral and Mrs. Charles E. Rigss. Tuckerman Prize, for similar excellence in the Middle School Department, to Miss Eloise Richberg, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donald R. Richberg.

Helen Harker Award, for the senior who most nearly represents the school's ideals in "honor, loyalty, courtesy, cooperation, punctuality and scholarship" in the minds of her fellow classmates, to Miss Alice Galloway, daughter of Herman J. Galloway, American Legion Award, for citizenship, to Miss Rosemary Morse, of Penn Yann, N. Y.

Maret School Benefit

Thirty dramatic students of the Maret School will present "A Midsummer Night's Dream" today at 4 p. m. at Cleveland avenue and Twenty-ninth street northwest for benefit of the Netherlands War Relief fund. In case of rain, the performance will be given at the Shoreham Hotel. Mrs. Charles Putnam is director.

'Chivalrous' Bandit Lets Victim Keep Her Small Change

A young bandit who robbed the operator of a dry cleaning establishment performed something of a noble gesture yesterday when he politely assented to the woman victim's plea that he leave enough small change to carry on business.

Mrs. Taylor

"Please don't take it all," pleaded Mrs. Mary Taylor, of 100 Nineteenth street southeast, when the youth carrying what she thought was a gun beneath his sweater, entered Howards Cleaners at 2008 Rhode Island avenue northeast, and demanded the contents of the cash register.

Mrs. Taylor, manager of the store, said the youth told her she could keep the small change. She gave him two $1 bills and $4 in quarters and left some $7 in change in the cash register.

Robinson Makes 'Brother Orchid' Comic Melo; British Classic Opens With Benefit at Little; This, That and the Other About the Theater

"LITTLE CAESAR," "The Last Gangster," "The Amazing Dr. Clitterhouse" and a few others, more or less come back to life in Edward G. Robinson's portrayal of the title role in the Warner Brothers production of "Brother Orchid," coming to the Earle screen on Friday. The "Dr. Clitterhouse" analogy, perhaps, is a little far-fetched. Eddie Robinson, however, leaves such an indelible stamp of his own personality on every gangster character he impersonates that all are apt to be recalled by any single one.

BELL

Yesterday afternoon's preview screening of "Brother Orchid" restored its star to the ranks of Hollywood's better comedians. For this reason, the picture is a little less grim and infinitely more amusing than most in its hoodlum classification, although there are a few periods of action that remotely approximate the battle of Flanders.

In this new underworld subject, Ann Sothern has a duplicate of the role played by Claire Trevor in "Dr. Clitterhouse." The two films possibly have their chief point of contact in this fact. Humphrey Bogart is the real bad man of the goings-on. One suspects that he must be getting a little tired of this sort of thing by this time.

Ralph Bellamy is another who has a role that is a carbon copy. This time, one harks back to "The Awful Truth" for Mr. Bellamy's earlier impersonation of a great heart from the wide open spaces, who is almost too good to be true. It is when he and his pals from the West cut loose on the gangsters that Flanders comes to mind.

All this is not to say that "Brother Orchid" is preponderantly "old stuff." It has many novel elements of excitement and humor and adds up, in the large view, on the side of audience hilarity.

It will be hard for Washington to forget that it was the first to see a dramatic version of the Richard Connell short story. Leo Brady dramatized "Brother Orchid" for the acting group of Catholic University and did a workmanlike job of it that attracted wide attention. The present screen play, however, is an adaptation apparently made from the original story and not from Mr. Brady's script. The Warner Brothers, as I understand it, acquired the rights to both the short story and Mr. Brady's play.

The English-made film of the English classic, "The Mill on the Floss," will have its Washington premiere in the Little Theater tonight at 9 o'clock, under the sponsorship of the Westhampton College Alumnae's Washington club. Its regular run will begin tomorrow morning. John Drinkwater, noted dramatist, adapted the dialogue from the novel by George Eliot. The book was a best seller back in the 1860's. If tonight's benefit were being held in London, instead of Washington, it would be necessary to lug along your gas mask, grope through unlighted streets, climb over sand-bag barricades and note the direction of the nearest air raid shelter. Lucky to be able to see "The Mill on the Floss" so conveniently and easily. The feature will be augmented by a short-reel, in color, of campus activities at Westhampton College.

After many months of planning and numerous postponements, the Variety Club of Washington—Tent No. 11 in the national organization and the heartbeat of "show business" in the National Capital—is to enlarge and beautify its clubrooms in the Willard Hotel. The alterations were blueprinted by John Eberson, noted theater architect and designer of many picture houses now operating in this city, something like a year ago. They call for vast increase in the size of the main lounge, a new and expanded cardroom and other rearrangements, not to mention a new decorative scheme. It is confidently boasted that the Washington Variety Club will be the handsomest in the country—there are a score or so of them in principal cities—when the rebuilding has been completed this summer, under long-term lease.

For the benefit of those who keep phoning in about it, the Cross Roads Theater now is selling season subscriptions at a flat $3.50 per seven-play pasteboard. All seats will be reserved, but there will be no downtown ticket office this summer. All transactions must be made with the theater box-office.

That new picture house for which ground was broken yesterday morning, may not be called the Avon, after all. It seems that that is only the "working title." It will be operated by Fred S. Kogod and Max Burka, co-owners, under the general managership of Charles H. Olive. It was designed by John J. Zink, who, like Mr. Eberson, already has many theaters standing in Washington, and will have a seating capacity of 1,050, with parking space for approximately 600 cars. Opening set for early September.

Mary Martin Halliday's wedding ring contains 18 H's made of baguette diamonds. Her husband also gave her a pair of diamond leaf clips, bought her a new home in Bel Air, while she bought her mother a home in Westwood as a birthday present. Mary says, "Don't expect we'll ever have a housewarming, because it will be years before we can afford anything but soap boxes."

HOPPER

Roz Russell, while doing a scene with Jimmy Stewart in "No Time for Comedy," had to say "Why don't you let other people write about immortality?" The fast talking Roz got it "immorality" each time—when Stewart piped up and said, "Now let's keep sex out of this scene.

Sinclair Lewis, husband of Dorothy Thompson—it used to be vice versa—has booked himself in summer stock for the lead in "Shadow and Substance." He says he might just as well, because all he sees of Dorothy these days is a shadow.

On "Rangers of Fortune," which is a replica of an old Mexican border town, with adobe huts, peons, and dishevelled whites wandering back and forth, I found Fred MacMurray and Albert Dekker pitching horseshoes, and I'll be darned if Patricia Morison wasn't there out-pitching them.

Gene Tierney, who's playing opposite Henry Fonda in "The Return of Frank James," wants it thoroughly understood that in her next picture she'll be kissed or else. In the present one she's kissless, and she was that way in her two stage plays. And she's getting mighty tired of that state of things.

Joan Bennett was wearing the cutest negligee in "I Married a Nazi," trimmed in feathers. And when I asked her what kind, she said, "Oh, you know—goofer feathers."

Pat O'Brien had a visitor on the "Knute Rockne" set while he was on location in South Bend—a man named Van Wallace, former Notre Dame student, paralyzed for life 16 years ago when a high dive resulted in a broken neck. He came all the way from Detroit in an ambulance to visit Pat. Went home with an invitation from Pat to be his guest at the premiere of the picture, all expenses paid, wherever it's shown.

Dolores Del Rio's landlord, Omar Kiam, felt conscience-stricken when he told Dolores "Absolutely no dogs allowed on the estate," and Dolores gave away her Schnauser—so he sent her a housebroken, 10-inch personality turtle named Xanadu. If it can learn to talk, it will be in Orson Welles' first picture. Yes, turtles live that long.

Mormon Story Full of Grief For D. Zanuck

'Brigham Young' Proves A Tricky Undertaking For Twentieth Century

By Frederick C. Othman
United Press Hollywood Correspondent

Hollywood, June 3.—Most heroes of history, from Jesse James to the builder of the Suez Canal, look exactly like Tyrone Power. There is no doubt about this. The movies prove it.

So when Twentieth Century-Fox put "Bringham Young" into production with Tyrone Power as the star, we dropped by the stage to see how he stacked up as the husband of 27 wives and early leader of the Mormon Church.

This turned out to be an error. Power wasn't playing Brigham Young. He was a fictional character in the movie version of the Mormon migration to Utah. So was Linda Darnell, the leading lady.

Power marries Linda in the end, but he doesn't marry anybody else.

The actual men with the numerous wives are played by veteran character actors. Dean Jagger is Brigham Young, who married 27 times, but had only 14 wives during the episodes shown in the picture. All 14 of his spouses will appear on the screen, but only 2 of them—Mary Astor and Jean Rogers— have speaking roles.

Carradine Shows Good Side

John Carradine, Hollywood's only two-faced actor, is Porter Rockwell. When Carradine takes villainous roles, he keeps the left, or ugly, side of his face toward the camera. When he's a hero, he keeps the right, or handsome, side in view. In his current role you will see only his right cheek; never his left.

The story, written by Louis Bromfield, shows the Mormons being driven from their homes at Nauvoo, Ill., by their irate neighbors from Carthage, and making their pilgrimage to Utah. Twenty thousand people actually started across the country in perhaps the greatest mass migration in America's history.

The tale then picks up the Mormons in the West, with all their crops being devoured by billions of grasshoppers, until great flocks of sea gulls appear miraculously and vanquish the insect horde.

Twentieth Century-Fox already has staked out a grasshopper refuge and obtained the co-operation of the Utah State Pest Control Board so that it can have real grasshoppers eating real wheat when the company goes on location in July. Hollywood will import its own sea gulls. Nature will do the rest.

Polygamy Honestly Treated

The studio originally intended to play down the polygamy angle of the story, with only one comic character having more than a single wife—and having trouble with all of them. Some Mormon leaders suggested that since polygamy is an historical fact, it might be better to handle it in an honest and dignified manner.

The rewritten story, showing the numerous wives of early Mormon churchmen, was approved by Heber J. Grant, president of the Church of the Latter Day Saints, studio spokesmen said.

The producers found themselves in a predicament when they retained Bromfield to write the story. He had just selected "Children of God," a story of the Mormons by Vardis Fisher, as an outstanding book. The movie makers figured it might look funny if he then wrote a Mormon story, himself. They said he might be accused of plagiarism.

So they bought the movie rights of "Children of God." They paid around $5,000.

And then Mormon officials complained. They said they did not like the way "Children of God" was written. They said they hoped the movie would not include any of the book.

Producer Darryl F. Zanuck acquiesced and that left him with $5,000 worth of story he never will be able to use. (That's one reason why picture makers have gray hair —or no hair at all.)

Joan's Fast Talk Hailed as Record

Fast talker marathoners have nothing on Joan Crawford when it comes to reeling off mile-a-minute dialogue.

For her first scene in "Susan and God" she delivered a page and a half of dialogue on 50 feet of film. When the experts had figured it out their calculations indicated that the star had set some sort of a record, for she spoke 282 words a minute.

And when, later, they ran off the sound track for a test, every word was declared perfect in distinct enunciation. So they okayed the "take" for the finished film.

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, June 3.

THERE'LL BE NO NEWS or stories in today's column. The notebooks in which I write the items of the places where copy can be found, the taxicab—which was taking me from Fefe's Monte Carlo to the Stork Club—was hit by another taxi. The cab door opened during the smashup and I was thrown clear. My co-passenger, Earle H. Rodney, was less fortunate. We were both examined by a physician. He sent me home, and Mr. Rodney to Doctors Hospital for observation.

AND SO HERE I sit crouched in a chair, for my back is taped, trying to think of words which not only may be informative but also can be typed with the left-hand fingers—because my right wrist, is bandaged and taped. I must work quickly; the doctor advised me to go to sleep immediately. And now it is 5:45 a. m. and the baby soon will be crying for his bottle. George will be up soon, too, waiting for the morning games with Pop.

There's only one quick way to finish this column. My books and their autographs and the letters from the author pasted inside the cover. They're within arm's reach, and so I won't even have to move from the chair to get them. Not moving is tough. I've never written a column without resorting to those easing interludes—going to the kitchen for some water . . . cold chicken in the icebox . . . or fruit Sylvia has left on the table for me. And so, now for the books, with the desperate hope they'll supply enough copy for a column.

THERE'S Kaufman & Hart's "You Can't Take It With You." Hart's inscription is: "From one gifted artist to another" . . . "The Fabulous Invalid." Hart wrote: "For Leonard, Sylvia and George, without whom every line of this play was written" . . . Dorothy Parker's "Not So Deep As a Well" was inscribed after she had seen our son bathed. Dorothy wrote: "To George Martin Lyons, with deep respect" . . . Vincent Sheean's "Personal History" was signed: "For Sylvia Lons, 'Who Is She That All Our, etc.'" (N. Y. Forty-eighth street, in fact). Inside is the $10 I borrowed from you the other night" . . . "Lilliom bears the autograph: "To Lyons, with my very best wishes, cordially, Ferenc Molnar." Molnar, who had just arrived in this country, had a friend write this for him on another piece of paper so that he could copy it—because English was foreign to him then.

ARTHUR KOBER'S "Pardon Me For Pointing" has a two-page inscription: "This is November 16, 1939. I am at the home of Sylvia and Leonard Lyons. I've had a very good dinner—fried chicken. There was a great surprise for me. Damon Runyon, who praised this book (God, I didn't think it was me he was writing about), was here with Mrs. Runyon. Luise Rainer, looking very lovely, sat beside me. Later came Judge Pecora—a man with gentleness and a lovely voice. Then tales—fascinating tales—the thing that makes New York so exciting. Stories on everybody. Well, here we were assembled—a lovely evening and people who are fine and decent and this is the world we ought to live in—a peaceful world, where people foregather and talk and say what they feel, and what they feel are decent and good things. Dr. Kober chatters on this way only when he is happy. I thank you."

FOR "THIS IS ON ME," Katharine Bush wrote: "For L. L., not that he needs a thing like this to while away the long winter evenings" . . . Irving Stone, in his "Lust For Life," wrote: "To both of you, because we have been friends from our first meeting at Grossinger's, two years ago." In the Jack London biography, "Sailor on Horseback," Stone wrote: "My, heart, my guts and a good part of my eyesight went into this book. I think you will like Jack London, because Jack London would have liked you" . . . New Orleans' Roark Bradford's inscription for "John Henry" was: "For Col. L. L. from Roark Bradford, Appomattox, 1939."

C. L. SULZBERGER'S "Sit-Down, With John L. Lewis" has a note from the author, written in August, 1938, from Waterloo place, London: "I miss dropping in at the Stork and La Conga, but I've had to wander around Europe. By the way, I just had a long talk with President Benes, in Prague. He assured me, among other things, that any German air raids on Prague will be well reciprocated with Czech attacks on Dresden, Nuremberg and possibly Berlin. Nice World" . . . "For East Broadway" Octavius Roy Cohen wrote: "To Sylvia and Leonard—and may God have mercy on their souls" . . . For Ernst and Lindley's libel book, "Hold Your Tongue," Morris Ernst wrote: "To Len, with a free choice of any word on page 154." On Page 154 were the words used by newspapers who, as a result, had lost their libel suits.

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

(While Louella O. Parsons is on her Honolulu vacation, this column is being written by her daughter, Harriett Parsons, producer of "Screen Snapshots.")

Hollywood, Jan. 3 (INS).—Bette Davis has a yen to play "Calamity Jane," the hard ridin', sharpshootin' lady wildcat of wild west days and because Bette's bosses, Jack Warner and Hal Wallis, like to keep her happy (and also because they know the role's a natural for her) they've selected the story of Calamity Jane for the next Davis vehicle to follow "The Letter." Jerry Wald and Richard Macauley wrote the screen play and it was their script which got Bette all steamed up to play Calamity.

LOUELLA PARSONS

La Davis won't be the first to portray the rough, tough pioneer gal. Jean Arthur played her in "The Plainsman," but in that film Calamity's story was only incidental. In the Warner epic it will be the whole works. And by the way, what's causing this attack of Westernitis which seems to have hit all our glamour gals? It's attaining the epidemic proportions of the screwball comedy cycle which swept the town four years ago.

Seems a trifle early to be announcing football yarns, but maybe Paramount wants to make sure of being the first this season to come forth with a gridiron epic. Anyway, they'll produce a little number called "Touchdown" (what, again?), and Wayne Morris has been borrowed from Warners for the starring role. I should say both starring roles since Wayne will play two brothers, one studious, the other athletic. He'll also have two leading ladies, Virginia Dale and Lillian Cornell, who played Ellen Drew's sisters in "Buck Benny Rides Again." Anthony Veiller will start production in July.

From L. O. P. in Honolulu: "Surprised to learn that Rex Ingram is living here and writing a book. Alice Terry has been here with him but has now returned to the States. Visited the Waikiki Theater, new since we were here, and the manager told me "Gone With the Wind" has made Vivien Leigh extremely popular with the islanders. Speaking of popularity, Irene Dunne made scores of friends. Everywhere they speak of her as "the lovely lady." Dorothy Lamour won great favor and so did Bette Davis. Andrea Leeds thanked every one of the fans with a gracious letter and I have heard her praises sung, too. My advice to Ginger Rogers is to come back here and never again pull the stunt she did when she landed and slipped off the ship in a dark wig. The social set here left her absolutely alone and the fans didn't even ask for autographs. Honolulu fans are very well behaved and expect to be treated equally well themselves. Thousands of them resented Ginger's attitude. Hawaii is a gracious spot and deserves graciousness from those who come here."

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Elyse Knox, T. C. F. player, running along the beach with Bob Sterling, fell over a big rock and bruised her face badly. Bob rushed her to the Santa Monica Hospital, where they said if he hadn't broken her fall she might have lost an eye; Gary and Sandra Cooper took off for a month's vacation on Long Island and May Robson left yesterday to visit her grandchildren in the East. Mrs. Freddie March came into town over the week-end with the two March youngsters to be with Freddie while he's making "Victory."

Claudette Colbert leaves in three weeks for a Honolulu sun-spree; Anne Shirley and John Payne tossed a swim party Saturday to break in their new pool; Dick Greene, minus tie and shave, but plus Virginia Field, spent the evening gabbing with her at the Pirates Den; The Jawn Barrymores and Jawge Jessels had adjoining booths at the Brown Derby t'other eve; Nice to hear that Miliza Korjus, reported as maybe never able to walk after that auto crash, is miraculously improved and won't have any lasting effects; Frank McHugh is nursing a charley horse from exercising too strenuously on his reducing bicycle.

That's all today. Write your own tag.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Any golfer born more than 34 years ago is wasting his time if he is seeking the United States open title at Cleveland this week. And the golfers who happen to be 27 years old stand the best chance of winning the championship. At least that is the deduction of the latest Golf Press Bulletin.

POVICH

In the last 20 years, only one golfer more than 34 years old has succeeded in winning the title. He was Ted Ray, the Englishman, who won a five-way play-off in 1920. Ray was a comparative ancient. He was 43. Sixteen of the last 20 opens have been won by golfers between the ages of 24 and 32, which apparently is the most fruitful span.

The 27-year-old golfer has been the most successful in U. S. Open play. Three times he has won the title. In that there may be added comfort for the current favorite, Ben Hogen, who is 27. Despite his high score in the sectional qualifying last week, Hogan will be the shortest-priced entry at Cleveland. The gents who make the odds are properly impressed by his leadership in this year's golf scoring and in purse winnings.

Militating against the oldsters in the open tournament is the physical grind of the play. Seventy-two holes of medal play with its accompanying mental strain place a premium on youthful vigor. In the 36-hole round of the final day's play, physical condition begins to count.

Last year at the Philadelphia Country Club, young Johnny Bulla, an obscure Chicago pro who somehow had finished second in the British Open, almost panicked the manufacturers. At the end of the third round of the Open, Bulla was leading. He was using a common drugstore ball that retailed for 50 cents, in contrast to the 75-cent models sponsored by his fellow pros in behalf of the home office. Just as the manufacturers were bemoaning their neglect to put Bulla under contract, he blew and slipped far out of the lead, averting some sort of a sales calamity.

For the winning pro in the Open there is, of course, a large check from the manufacturer whose goods he is sponsoring. From such honorariums and royalties, the Open winner profits handsomely in contrast to the mere $1,000 cash prize awarded by the U. S. G. A.

Executives of the larger golf equipment companies will hold their breaths during the tournament at Cleveland. MacGregor is the favorite to win the 1940 open. Nobody named MacGregor is in the entry list, but the MacGregor company is represented by such able competitors as Ben Hogan, Jimmy Demaret and Byron Nelson. They give MacGregor the strongest hand in the tourney.

Until the Goodall round robin tournament two weeks ago, Demaret was the nation's leading pro in point of prize money won. When he was displaced, it was no blow to the MacGregor Co., because the new leader was its man Hogan. Nelson rounds out a titanic trinity for MacGregor. He won the open last year, of course.

The Dunlop Company will be rooting for Henry Picard, P. G. A. champion, and Craig Wood, its chief representatives. That pair did not appear especially formidable until last week when the big, hulking blond Wood won the prized Metropolitan Open with the greatest scoring spree in major golf history—a 264 for the 72 holes, or an average of 68 strokes per round. Dunlop's stock in this week's open rocketed with that performance.

Until the last hole at the Philadelphia Country Club last June, the Wilson Co. was figuratively rubbing its hands in great glee as its man Sammy Snead loomed as the winner. Snead stood on the last tee needing only a par five to win the open for dear old Wilson U. He took an inglorious 8 and was licked. But Wilson is back with not only Snead but the 1937 and 1938 winner, Ralph Guldahl in there swinging for the greater glory of Wilson clubs and the K-28 Wilson ball.

Vice President Bobby Jones, of the Spalding Co., is sending two of golf's most hard-bitten veterans after the honors. Lighthorse Harry Cooper, the perennial threat, and Horton Smith will be carrying the Spalding banner at Cleveland as the company's first-line pair. On the results at Cleveland will depend the great army of dubs' choice of balls and clubs for the next year.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, June 3.—We've got some regrettable news for you today. Lew Diamond and Evil Eye Finkle have come to the end of their dignified relationship. The contract to which both affixed their stalwart X's expired like a peace pact not long ago and Finkle—thought cruelly embarassed by several fighters who failed to curl up and collapse when he put the eye on them, for pay—said he might sign a new one and he might not.

CONSIDINE

Evil Eye, a harmless fraud who carved a daffy niche in boxing for himself by renting himself to managers to jinx opposing fighters by staring them out of countenances, played "hard to get' when there was talk of a new contract with his manager, Diamond. He got so temperamental, it is reported, that he wanted 66 2-3 per cent of the money he was earning for fixing on the opposition the baleful and ruining glare of a dead carp.

Diamond blanched at treason of this nature and, with the sympathetic support of the league of outraged managers, roared back at Finkle that it was only out of the goodness of his (Diamond's) heart that he (Diamond) was giving him (Finkle) 50 per cent of what he (Finkle) earned—minus, of course, expenses.

Finkle is also reported to have demanded a meal. But "The Honest Brakeman," as Lew is called, thought that the vicious practice might become habit forming and indignantly vetoed the idea. So Finkle, an ungrateful oaf who never seemed to appreciate the fact that Diamond would give him (Finkle) the shirt off his (Finkle's) back, upped and refused to sign another 99-year pact with Diamond as a hexer.

Just which art, profession or WPA unit will be graced hereafter by Finkle's presence remains to be seen. First he plans to take a long rest, give his eye a chance to store up a little more hex, and make a comeback under new management. To keep in practice he will view with alarm, keep an eye peeled for the girls, play two weeks of King Leer, and receive an honorary degree from Ogle-thorpe University.

Diamond was so upset over losing the prize monkey of his aromatic stable of prize-fight curiosities that he grieved nearly 20 seconds. He had had a lot of trouble with Finkle. He caught him redhanded and red-eyed one night, without his blinkers—which were designed to keep the evil in the Evil Eye.

Then, in a supreme test, the eye failed him. Diamond ordered Finkle to put the eye on the room clerk at a Detroit flop, while Lew was tiptoeing out with two trunks, a pink bridge lamp and a rare copy of the Laughing Cavalier. From behind a rubber plant, Finkle threw everything he had into the crucial task, but the guy behind the grille just looked at him as if he were nuts, let out a yell for the house dick, and it took Diamond four hours to convince the porter-pinkerton that he was a somnambulist.

Then, in full grief, Diamond was hit squarely between the eyes with a ray of hope. He wheezed into a joint in Detroit a few days ago, looking for a cup of coffee, and a toothpick—to use when he went over and stood out front of the Book Cadillac's restaurant—when suddenly his attention was attracted to a phoney Swami moving from table to table. The bum had on a coat of gilt which needed touching up here and there and a curled up hotel towel on his head, in Hindu fashion.

No, it wasn't Finkle, But Lew recognized him. It was his original hexer, his original caster of catastrophic glares, his initial experimenter with the hext that hurts, the stare that stupefies, the glower that turns men's legs to glucose; Meyer, the eyer from Ohier. Diamond hadn't seen him for years but recognized his shirt as one he (Diamond) had accidentally found in his cardboard kiester the night after he roomed with Mike Jacobs.

Meyer, the eyer from Ohier, had a duebill in the joint, so they celebrated with cream in Diamond's coffee, and sitting downwind from a guy with a corona-corona, they held an important business conference which may have heavy repercussions in the fight game. Meyer, the eyer from Ohier, agreed to give up the Swami racket, which was a little tough on the dogs anyway, and come back under the exclusive aegis of Diamond.

Diamond is trying to close a deal whereby Meyer will work in Gus Lesnevich's corner Wednesday night in Detroit when Gustave tries to knock the glamor and filling out of Billy Conn. It is a critical hour in Diamond's career as an impresario of fistic freaks. If Meyer's glimmer is ignored by Conn, if his pasty face and glinting orb makes no more impression on Conn than any other face lighted by the eerie glow of the ring lights, Diamond may be forced to go back to work. Finkle is through, eyewashed up before his time. Burned out like a photo flash bulk. Meyer, the eyer from Ohier, is Lew's last chance. If Lesnevich can come through—an upset which would set Mike Jacobs off at a gallop, armed with a shotgun looking for Gussie—it will be the making of Meyer. He could rest on his laurels, sit back and watch Diamond grow back into his belt line.

Whether Finkle plans to counter attack only time will tell. It is rumored about Detroit that he will attempt to crash the gate Wednesday night, disguised in a clean shirt, and attempt to out-eye the eyer. If they glare from opposite sides of the ring, retina vs. retina, master vs. granulated pupil, we expect both Conn and Lesnevich to be electrocuted the moment they break the beam.

Steve Floored Six Times Before Bout Is Halted at End Of Sixth Round

By Al Hailey

The ironclad jaw of Steve Mamakos was finally cracked last night—cracked by a slashing Phil Furr, who slammed the Golden Greek to the canvas six times before technically knocking him out before a berserk house in Griffith Stadium.

Referee Eddie LaFond halted the business at the end of the sixth round, when a ringside doctor examined Mamakos' nose and found a cartilage broken. The technical knockout was credited as coming in the seventh because Steve failed to answer the bell for that round.

Two times in the second, twice in the third and twice in the fourth, Mamakos fell to the canvas under the pile-driving right hand of the 20-year-old Furr.

Murderous Beating

It was a murderous bombing that Furr dealt out—a bombing which saw Mamakos take one of the most brutal beatings ever seen in Washington. It was the first time Mamakos had ever lost a knockout verdict in half a decade of fighting.

As early as the fourth round the ball park was a bedlam of hoarse screams to "stop that fight" as 3,000 fans—the largest Washington fight crowd in a year—joined in a plea to spare Mamakos further punishment.

Furr himself asked Referee LaFond to stop the fight in the early part of the sixth, but when LaFond looked at Matt Twomey in Mamakos' corner the Golden Greek's manager shook his head.

Blood at Ringside

It was sheer massacre, with blood splattering far out in the ringside every time Furr's gloves landed with sickening thuds on Mamakos' granite-like jaw.

Steve went into the ring a 2-to-1 favorite to beat Phil, and he never stopped driving gamely forward—just as he never quit absorbing every kind of punch Phil had to offer.

Mamakos was made to order for Phil. Every time he pushed out those looping lefts and rights, Furr shot a lightning-like jab straight to the jaw or over Mamakos' ears.

Indication of what was to happen came in the first round when Furr drove in a right high on Mamakos' head that made the Southwest lad's

Pete Scalzo Wins 8-Round Decision Over Belloise

By the Associated Press

New York, June 3.—Pete Scalzo, recognized as featerweight champion by the National Boxing Association, pounded out an eight-round decision over former Champion Mike Belloise before 9,100 fans at Starlight Park tonight. Both are New Yorkers.

Scalzo was the aggressor from the start, and won by a wide margin although Belloise managed to tie him up frequently. Pete kept throwing left hooks to the head and body and had Belloise hanging onto the ropes at the finish.

New York, June 3.—The world champion Yankees completed a sweep of their four-game series with the St. Louis Browns and brought their recent record to 10 victories in 11 games by hammering out a 7-1 verdict over the tail-enders today.

Atley Donald, apparently recovered from the sciatica that kept him out of action till last week, parceled out five hits, three by Harlond Clift, for his second triumph without defeat. The only run scored off him was a homer by Clift in the second.

New York, as usual, made its eight hits count full measure, mixing them opportunely with six walks from John Niggeling and two Brownie errors.

Chicago Sends Dean To Tulsa for 'Work'

By the Associated Press

Chicago, June 3.—Jerome (Dizzy) Dean, $185,000 pitching failure with the Chicago Cubs, is going back to the Texas League, where ten years ago he began his meteoric rise to baseball glory.

There he hopes to begin a comeback to the major leagues.

Phil K. Wrigley, owner of the Cubs, at Dean's own request, obtained waivers today on the one-time great pitcher from 15 other major league clubs so the way could be opened for Dean's return to the minors.

The plan tonight was to option Dean to the Tulsa, Okla., club, managed by Roy Johnson, until this season a Cub coach. Johnson is thoroughly familiar with Dean's temperament. Tulsa is an affiliate of the Wrigley club.

Cubs Retain Ownership

Thus the Cubs would retain ownership of the big right-hander who won 30 games for the St. Louis Cardinals and two World Series games in 1934.

The Cubs purchased Dean in April, 1938, just as the season opened for $185,000 in cash and three players—Curt Davis and Clyde Shoun, pitchers, both still with the Cards, and George Stainback, an outfielder, now with Montreal of the International League.

Dean, who has submitted to all sorts of treatments mor his ailing arm, including the extraction of teeth, figures a season of pitching in a hot climate will restore his effectiveness. The achievement of Tex Carleton, former Cub, in pitching a no-hit game for Brooklyn a month ago gave eDan the idea of making a comeback in the minors. Carleton spent last season in the American Association.

Officials of the Cubs will meet tomorrow to make plans for Dean's

Chase and Haynes Face Indians in Twin Bill Today

It will be the first twin bill of the season at the stadium.

For the opening game, Manager Bucky Harris has chosen Ken Chase to oppose the Cleveland club. Chase rarely misses a chance to work against the Indians. At Cleveland two weeks ago he was the hero of a 3-to-2 triumph of the Nats.

Harris last night was suddenly forced to change his pitching plans for the second game of the doll. Originally he had intended to start Walter Masterson, author of a three-hit performance in his last outing, but Masterson reported ill and will be out of uniform. Joe Haynes will get the second-game assignment.

It will be the second trip of the Indians to Griffith Stadium. Cleveland, which has never been lower than second in the standings, is now only a game in the rear of the leading Red Sox.

Milnar Hurls Shutout, Beats Athletics, 4-0

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, June 3.—Al Milnar, Cleveland lefthander, scored his seventh victory of the season today by blanking the Philadelphia Athletics, 4 to 0. It was the first time this year the Athletics have lost by a shutout.

Milnar was hammered for seven hits—one more than the Indians collected off Chubby Dean—but he came through in the pinches to give Cleveland an even break in a four-game series.

Ray Mack clouted his fourth home run of the season in the fourth, when the Indians scored three of their runs. The other tally came in the sixth.

Griffs' Ace Has Shutout Until Ninth

Error by Welaj Paves Way for All Detroit Runs; Bloodworth Smashes Home Run

By Shirley Povich.
Post Staff Writer

Dutch Leonard put a stop yesterday to the Nats' retreat tactics. He rallied 'em with a superb pitching performance that beat the Tigers and recaptured sixth place for Washington. Behind Leonard, the Nats suddenly became an attacking force.

The score was 9 to 3, but Leonard's sixth victory of the year bore all the aspects of a shut-out triumph until two were out in the ninth. At that point a fly ball was misjudged by Johnny Welaj, of all people, and the Tigers' three runs of the day poured across the plate.

For eight innings, big Leonard and his little knuckle ball shut the Tigers out in masterful style. Going into the ninth, and coasting behind an immense 9-0 lead, Leonard was fashioning for himself a six-hit game. Eventually, the Tigers collected 10 hits.

Two Home Runs

The Nats were quite unrecognizable yesterday. They pounded out the two home runs that were hit in the game. Gerald Walker, deeply obligated to Third Baseman Frankie Higgins, who muffed his foul pop in the fifth inning, responded by hitting the next pitch into the leftfield stands for a homer with Johnny Welaj on base.

Whatever notions the Tigers were nursing about reclaiming the game in the late innings were dispatched in the seventh by Jimmy Bloodworth. With two pals on base, Bloodworth belted his second Griffith Stadium homer of the year over Hank Greenberg's head and into the lap of a happy bleacher fan among the 3,000 customers on the premises.

Manager Del Baker, of the Tigers, uncovered Rookie John Gorsica as a starting pitcher, and the Nats in due time uncovered him as nothing of the sort. Making his first big league start, the big right-hander from Beaumont was slugged out of the box in six innings, and the Nats renewed their assault on Lynn Nelson, his successor.

The Nats greeted Gorsica with a run in the first inning when Lewis doubled to left and took third when Greenberg misplayed the ball. Welaj fetched him home with an infield out. In the third, they upped their lead to 2-0 when Lewis drew a walk, went to third on Welaj's single and scampered home on Walker's infield out.

Higgins helped the Nats to their pair of runs in the fourth. With Welaj on base, he made an incredible muff of Walker's easy foul pop, and then it was that Walker whaled into a 3-2 pitch and banged it for his home run.

The lower end of the Nats' batting order assaulted Gorsica for two runs in the sixth. Pofahl, Ferrell and Leonard singled in succession to bring home the first run, but the rally was temporarily halted when Leonard was thrown out at second while trying to take an extra base. George Case moved the second run of the inning home on a perfect squeeze play bunt that scored Ferrell from third.

Ninth Inning Rally

Welaj's double was the Nats' first act against Nelson in the seventh and after Bonura walked, Bloodworth fetched three runs across the plate with his home run drive into the bleachers.

That contribution upped Leonard's lead to 9-0. Only two men had reached third base against him in the first eight innings, and only in the fourth did the Tigers get two men on base in a single inning.

Leonard started his bid for a shutout in the ninth by fanning Hank Greenburg, but Rudy York singled for the Tigers' seventh hit. Campbell hit into a force play, but Higgins prolonged the rally with a single to center. It was at this point that Welaj betrayed Leonard. On Sullivan's line drive into centerfield, Welaj stood his ground, only to discover that the ball was passing over his head. It ended up as a triple and two runs trotted home. Lynn Nelson drove in the third with a single but Leonard sealed his victory by causing Pinchhitter Earl Averill to pop to Bonura.

Mamakos Hits Canvas Third Time Flat on Face at Ball Park

Earhardt Named Tide Starter; Rival Coaches Are Optimistic

By Bill Burnett

Against one of the most highly publicized scholastic ball clubs in D. C. history — Central — Eastern High today hurls its team of unsung heroes in the championship game of the 1940 interhigh series. Scene: Anacostia High diamond. Time: 3:30 p. m.

Opposing pitchers, announced yesterday by the respective coaches, will be Bill Fisher for Central's defending champions and Warren Earhardt for the White Tide. Both are right-handers, Fisher boasting six straight victories without a loss in the regular series and Earhardt having lost only once in five starts.

Though the same two nines came together last year to decide the title, neither of today's pitchers participated in the game. Fisher was ineligible and Earhardt was playing understudy to the Tide's chunky but effective "Puddin" Lovett.

Coaches and players of both teams go into hostilities merely as a formality, both sides foreseeing victory without a great deal of trouble. Coach Jack Ray of Central naturally is the most optimistic.

"The first five hitters in my lineup will pound the cover off the ball," he cheerfully predicted yesterday. "And it doesn't matter who they pitch against us. If Fisher is 'right' the score won't be close. Our only line-up change will probably be Charley Kligman in leftfield replacing Dick Mosser. That should further strengthen our plate punch."

Eastern's Coach "Chief" Guyon was slightly more reticent.

"Every good team runs into a bad streak once in a while," opined the graying Tide mentor, "and Central's is due. Our team, by the same token, is due for a long series of breaks. Just don't sell us short."

One big factor weighs in Eastern's favor today. While Central's stars performed for photographers and generally got their fill of the headlines this year, Eastern's youthful delegation toiled in obscurity. It is hungry for victory and the notice that goes with it.

Dizzy Dean Sent To Tulsa by Cubs

transfer to Tulsa. Dean himself confirmed the plan through Mrs. Dean. The big pitcher was in bed today nursing a scalp wound suffered when he fell out of an automobile while riding home with First Baseman Glen Russell after Sunday's twin bill.

When Russell suddenly stopped at a traffic light the right door of the car flew open and Dean, sitting on that side, tumbled out on his head.

Furr Scores TKO Over Mamakos

knees buckle. But he didn't go down until the second.

Steve tore out of his corner swinging wildly, and Phil calmly measured him with a left hook and then sent a straight right crashing to the jaw. Mamakos went down for no count. Up again, he went back down under the same sort of thing. It was that way, too, in the third and fourth rounds.

Steve went down for nine twice in the third. The second time he fell flat on his face and from that point on it was merely his nerve and bull-like strength that carried him on. He was knocked skittering across the ring repeatedly, and after the fourth-round knockdowns he had difficulty arising.

The bout, drawing a net gate of $3,396.63, virtually washed up Mamakos as far as the local picture is concerned. It was a battle for the "welterweight championship of the District"—a fight between two Washington-born boys meeting for the first time in a "grudge" affair. And Furr, the veteran of almost a dozen years' fighting, taught the 23-year-old Greek a bitter lesson.

Al Gilbert, 164, Washington's "light-heavyweight champion of the South," scored his tenth straight victory by knocking out Johnny Roach, 158, of Wilmington, Del., in 2 minutes 35 seconds of the third round of the six-round semifinal. Al was all over the Delaware fighter and it was a flurry of chopping lefts and rights to the chin that battered Roach to the canvas to stay.

Billy Banks, classy little colored Washingtonian, took a unanimous decision over Buddy Moore, 133, of Washington also in a slam-bang battle that stole the preliminary show. Billy beat Buddy all over the ring, and at the end Moore was gazing about wildly, hardly able to stand on his feet as blood poured in a steady stream from his mouth. Another six saw Frankie Wills, 149, of Washington, take a split decision over Baltimore's Eddie Finazzo, 149.

In a rought and tumble pair of fours, Washington's Ray Landis, 138, decisioned Alex Cuipiano, 136, of Puerto Rico, and Vince Tummenello, 126, of Baltimore, took the nod over Tommy Ricco, 124, another Puerto Rican.

Chisox Shell Ostermueller, Beat Bosox, 7-4

By the Associated Press

Boston, June 3.—The Chicago White Sox made all but three of their hits account for runs today as they evened the four-game series with the Red Sox by shelling Lefty Fritz Ostermueller for a 7-to-4 victory.

The Chisox pounded the southpaw for six hits and as many tallies before they drove him from the mound after four innings. Two singles, a pass and a sacrifice gave the visitors a two-run start in the first inning, and they clinched the contest in the fourth by scoring four more tallies on three singles, a pass, an error and Bill Dietrich's double.

On Fishing

During the last ten days the stocking crew of Frank Bentz, chief clerk of the Maryland Conservation Commission, has planted 6,200 trout, every one more than 12 inches in length. Reserved at Lewistown and Cushwa hatcheries are 5,000 more for a final stocking about the middle of June.

ACKERMAN

Fro mthe Bear Creek hatchery all the streams in Garrett County have been stocked during the past several days, and there, too, 3,000 big trout are being held for another later stocking.

From the Bear Creek hatchas though those anglers who bellyached so long and loud a few weeks back about Maryland not doing any trout planting were hollering so they wouldn't be hurt.

We count up close to 70,000 trout stocked this season. Not bad with the small amount of money they have to work on.

For the information of stream anglers, this last stocking was: Beaver Creek, 1,000; Middle Creek, 1,000; Big Hunting Creek, 1,200; Fishing Creek, 1,200, and Mill Creek, Montgomery County, 1,200.

We made the suggestion to Frank, several weeks ago, that crappie planted in many nearby streams would supply far more sport for a greater number of anglers than does the trout plantings. He was more than receptive to the idea. Any requests by fishing organizations and Izaak Walton chapters for crappie would probably be filled as fast as they are available.

Our good friend, Capt. Jimmie Jordan at Colonial Beach, is proving a real fund of information. He says of cotton thread: "One of the greatest forces against conservation are our fishing guides. No matter where you may engage one, professional jealousy exists. The idea of the right way to get more business, among the guides, is to bring in more fish than your competitors. This is one of the principal reasons why cotton thread fishing is frowned upon by charter boatmen and guides."

Capt. Jim's indictment of his own fraternity was true several years ago, but it was directly the result of the mistaken belief of many anglers that it was the best guide who brought in the greatest number of fish. We believe these days are gone—that many anglers today will not fish with guides who will not release their unwanted fish, and that there are many guides today who are as firm in their belief of conservation of our fishes as any of their fares. In fact, we know many who will not continue to fish for what they call "fish-hogs."

Reds, Dodgers Mark Time With Victories

Derringer Beats Bees, 3-2, Despite Fette's Hurling

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, Ohio, June 3.—Lou Fette pitched three-hit relief ball for seven innings today but it was not enough to best Paul Derringer as the league-leading Reds defeated Boston 3 to 2. All scoring was done in the first inning.

It was Derringer's sixth victory. Southpaw Joe Sullivan, who lasted one inning, drew his fifth defeat against two victories.

The decision kept the Reds two games ahead of Brooklyn's Dodgers, who also won.

Error Prevents Shutout

Derringer might have had a shutout had not Frank McCormick muffed Frey's relay of a double-play grounder by Buddy Hassett with one out. Max West then doubled to score the young first baseman and Chet Ross singled to send West across.

The Reds quickly got to Sullivan. Craft walked and was forced, but doubles by Mike and Frank McCormick netted two runs.

Frank McCormick took third as Sisti threw out Ernie Lombardi and scored as Eddie Miller bobbled Werber's grounder.

Shaky Start

Derringer started shakily in the second, yielding a single to Al Lopez and a walk to Miller, but settled down and retired the next nine men to face him. Ross tripled to open the ninth but stayed right there as Tony Cuccinello and Lopez grounded and Miller popped.

Lopez was snuffed out in attempted theft of second after each of his two singles.

Fette was the real defensive star of the game, retiring 15 men from the time Frank McCormick drew his second double in the third until Frey singled with two out in the eighth.

The victory gave the Reds three out of four games in the series.

Hugh Casey Hurls Five-Hit Ball; Wasdell Doubles

Chicago, June 3.—Hugh Casey got into the spirit of the Brooklyn Dodgers' drive today and held the Chicago Cubs to five hits as the Flatbushers captured their third consecutive one-run decision, 3 to 2.

Until the fifth inning the sophomore right-hander kept the Cubs hitless. Then a single by Bill Herman and a double by Al Todd scored Chicago's first run. The other was a pinch homer by Bill Nicholson in the eighth.

The Dodgers collected 11 hits off Claude Passeau in the eight innings he worked and jumped in front in the first frame with a run on three singles, finally being retired with the bases loaded.

Brooklyn got another in the fifth on an error and a double by Jim Wasdell, who was out trying to stretch the hit. Two fruitless singles followed.

In the sixth Dolph Camilli smacked out his fifth home run for what proved to be the deciding tally.

Man of the Month

The Man of the Month contest is sponsored jointly by The Washington Post and Station WJSV. Following each of the Nats' games, Arch McDonald will award points to Washington players as he deems performances merit. The Man of the Month will be presented with a $50 merchandise order by The Post.

By Arch McDonald

Station WJSV Baseball Broadcaster

Dutch Leonard moves into the lead in the Man of the Month contest for June, with his excellent performance against the Tigers yesterday. Points were distributed as follows, and we explain that due to pitchers' comparative infrequent appearances, winning pitchers hereafter will be awarded a commensurately larger number of points for meritorious performances:

To Leonard, 18 points, because he encouraged the Nats to win the ball game by holding the Tigers scoreless in the first eight innings and because he would have turned in a shut-out save for a bit of ill luck in the ninth.

To Gerald Walker, three points, because he drove in the Nats' first run and later hit a homer to drive in two more.

To Buddy Lewis, three points, because he made three hits, one a double, and scored two runs.

To Jimmy Bloodworth, three points, because he hit a homer with two on base.

The totals:

Sidney Hudson	7	Jake Early	3
Johnny Welaj	6	Gerald Walker	3
Zeke Bonura	5	Buddy Lewis	3
Jimmy Pofahl	4	Jimmy Bloodworth	3

Bowman Stumbles Between Third and Home In Ninth After Pittsburgh Has Scored Twice

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, June 3.—The unlucky Pirates dropped a 4-to-3 decision to the New York Giants today when Joe Bowman stumbled between third and home with what would have been the tying run in the last inning.

Trailing 4 to 1 as they went to bat, the Buccaneers bunched three of their eight hits off Bill Lohrman for two runs. Elbie Fletcher singled, Spud Davis tripled and Pinchhitter Bowman tripled, then fell down on his way to the plate.

The Giants made the most of their opportunities, with Harry Danning hitting his eighth home run to break a tie in the fourth inning and also smacking two singles.

Olin Dutra's 68 Tops National Open Practice Scores

Vic Ghezzi, Hogan Both Under Par

Sam Snead Equals Par 72; Prediction On Winner's Score Down to 285 Total

By the Associated Press

Canterbury Club, Cleveland, June 3.—The golfing youngsters practicing for the National Open tournament here took a back seat temporarily today while one of the old-timers, Olin Dutra, showed them how to operate.

The swarthy Californian, who weathered a famous stomach ache to capture the Open back in 1934, shot the layout in 68 strokes in his first real practice round, knocking four strokes off par and never leaving the fairway. Putting out on every green, he wound up with 4 birdies and 14 pars.

Dutra's score was more impressive than the 68 shot yesterday by Ben Hogan, as he was playing to the regular Canterbury greens, while Hogan's score was made on temporary greens somewhat short of the regular carpets. Dutra played the course exactly as it will be played in the 72-hole championship starting Thursday.

Playing Fine Golf

"I'm hitting the ball as well as I ever did in my life," the veteran declared. "The course still was heavy today, but I seem to be getting a better roll than some of the others. But anybody is likely to shoot a 68 in practice."

The Dutra foursome, which included Lawson Little, Bobby Cruickshank and the muscular John (Mysterious) Montague, carried the biggest gallery of the day. Montague and Cruickshank each had par 72, Little a 73.

Vic Ghezzi turned in the second best score in practice, a 70, while Hogan continued to knock the pins out of the cups with a 71. Sam Snead, Craig Wood and the two Argentines, Martin Pose and Aurelio Castanon, equaled par.

285 May Win Again

As a result of lo wscores, the boys are reducing their guesses at the figure likely to win the title.

Several now believe that it will take about a 285 to lead the field of 170 starters, whereas a few days ago they thought a 290 might turn the trick. Canterbury, obviously, is not quite so tough as it was cracked up to be, and it will become easier as the sun dries the heavy grass.

Most of the big guns already are here, getting in their practice licks. Bud Ward, who shot the best score of the amateurs in last year's open, went around in 75 today. Jimmy Hines had a 74 and Johnny Farrell and Paul Runyan each took 80.

Others Test Course

Others who played around, feeling out the course but not trying to score included Gene Sarazen, Jimmy Thomson, Al Espinosa, Ed Dudley, Johnny Revolta, John Bulla and Clayton Heafner. Byron Nelson, the defending champion, turned up with Jimmy Demaret late in the day and immediately teed off for a hurried round.

Chicago Aztecs Win Roller Match

The Chicago Aztecs evened up their roller derby series at 7-all with Washington's Pawnees last night at Riverside Stadium in a rough-and-tumble game, 12 to 10.

The triumph came in an "open house" after Steve Irwin tied up the count at 10-10 as Capt. Roy Gowin of the Pawnees was put out of action by Chicago's Capt. Jim McCaskey. A fierce fight between Vera McClelland, Chicago's titian-haired girl skater, and Bernice Abar, of Washington, broke out, and McClelland was fined $10.

Zell Eaton, 2 Others Withdraw From Open

New York, June 3 (AP).—The United States Golf Association today announced three withdrawals from the National Open championship, and three alternates who will replace them in the tournament starting Thursday at Cleveland.

The players who dropped out are Dick Grout, Wichita Fals, Tex.; Robert Cochran, Normandy, Mo., and Zell Eaton, Brownsville, Tex. Their places will be taken by Elroy Marti, Houston, Tex. Anthony Klebusch, St. Louis, and Raymond Gafford, Fort Worth, Tex.

Cubs to Set Up School for Major League Aspirants

By the United Press

Chicago, June 3.—The Chicago Cubs Training Camp, Inc., received its charter today to train youngsters for major league baseball careers.

Incorporators were Phil K. Wrigley, owner of the Cubs; William Veeck, who will serve as president, and Paul V. Harper.

The "West Point of Baseball," a no-fee, expenses-paid setup, is for boys over 17 who are too old for American Legion competition and too young for organized baseball, Wrigley said.

Wally Roettger, former outfielder for the St. Louis and Cincinnati National League clubs and head coach at the University of Illinois which tied for this season's Big Ten championship, will be head instructor at the 11-week session in Wrigley Field, members of the Cub squad will assist Roettger.

C. M. Feltner's Dulie Captures Handicap at Charles Town

Tucci's 7-Year-Old Breaks Right Leg; U. S. Randle Entry Wins; $90.80 Double

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent

Charles Town, W. Va., June 3.—Perfect racing weather returned to Jefferson County today, and the green, white, black and red, familiar as the colors of C. M. Feltner, of Berryville, Va., was borne to victory by Dulie. The race was the Baltimore News-Post Handicap, a test of 11-16 miles. With Jockey Johnny Hernandez doing some of his best booting, the 5-year-old son of Dunlin and Julie led virtually from flag fall to finish.

A full length behind the winner came Mrs. M. Breiner's Charming Herod to take down second money. An additional length and a half behind the place was Mrs. A. S. Bowman's Schley Buck.

Dulie was installed the favorite in a rather open betting affair and rewarded the faithful with a $6.60 mutuel. He stepped the long route in 1:46 1-5 and within a second of the track record set by Oversight. Dulie was carrying 115 pounds today, 4½ more than the holder of the mark.

The race saw the end of the career of Mrs. J. Paoli's Brush Hook, purchased from the Greentree Stable more than a year ago by Joseph Tucci, of Washington. Brush Hook broke his right front leg going up the backstretch. Jockey Mike Sarno pulled up the 7-year-old son of Sickle. The track veterinarian mercifully applied the poison needle to the gelding.

Dulie had to be rushed to take the early lead and then was given a tussle for the pace-making honors by Goodwine. When the latter quit, Dulie found a new challenger in Giggle Lee. This one faltered. In the stretch along came Charming Herod. Hernandez glanced over his shoulder, saw trouble brewing and went to work. Dulie held his margin of a length from that point to the wire.

Deodo, owned by U. S. Randle, of Washington, put the finishing touches on a $91.80 payoff in the daily double. The gelding won the third race after Jockey C. Kirk had brought Stonehaven home a winner in the second race. The winner of each contest paid $12.60.

BELLTHORN, first to get under way, took a commanding lead in the opening furlong and held sway thereafter, winning with speed in reserve. AUPOIN, carried wide at the turns and steadily handled, closed gamely under punishment. HASTINGS VIEW saved ground and had no excuses. PLAYDEMA was in the thick of contention to the stretch and weakened.

Corn Strong On Red Cross Meal Needs

Wheat Rallies, Ends Near Previous Close; Moves Are Narrow

By the Associated Press

Chicago, June 3.—Corn showed the only strength in the grain market today, scoring gains of more than a cent while wheat and other grains were lower most of the session. Wheat rallied, however, and closed near Saturday's level.

Higher corn futures were due to buying attributed to industries and elevators. Commercial demand has been good because of restricted supplies as a result of the loan program. Reports that export subsidy shipments are proceeding, that the Red Cross is being provided with meal for European relief work and that the Government is in the market for grits also stimulated demand. Much replanting is necessary in central and northern Illinois, crop experts said, because of worm damage.

Lower securities prices and expectations that the private crop reports tomorrow will show a material improvement in the domestic wheat harvest prospect helped to depress wheat. Prices were off ⅛@1 cent at one time but later strengthened with corn and closed ⅛ lower to ⅛ higher, compared with Saturday July 82½-82, September 82½-¾. Corn finished 1-1½ cents higher, July 62¾, September 62-61⅞. Oats were unchanged to ¼ off. Rye ¼-½ down and lard unchanged to 3 higher.

Trade attention is being directed toward steps taken to send food supplies to Europe for relief of refugees. Whether this work will be enlarged to World War proportions cannot be determined but the fact that the Red Cross has an arrangement with the Department of Agriculture whereby it can obtain surplus foods at about half market prices was interpreted as an indication of the trend. Plans already have been perfected for the purchase of wheat flour, corn meal, lard and some other commodities.

In addition, British government purchase last week of 50,000,000 bushels from the Canadian wheat board provided another clew to the future of international grain trade under war conditions. This is enough wheat to satisfy normal British requirements for three months.

Corn receipts of 425 cars, the largest in some time, consisted mostly of Government corn en route to Great Britain. July oats, all soy beans futures and July and September rye were at the pegged minimums, which restricted trade in these contracts.

Sugar Futures Move Unevenly

New York, June 3 (AP).—Sugar futures moved irregularly in thin trade today. Ware reports blanketed the market in uncertainty and few traders were willing to operate aggressively.

Week-end reports indicated France has taken about five cargoes of American and Cuban refined sugar in the past two weeks. Recent exports to France were estimated at about 25,000 tons, of which 15,000 were previously reported.

July	1.85	1.84	*1.84
September	1.90	1.89	*1.90

Copper Buying Continues Heavy

New York, June 3 (AP).—Friday's sales of domestic copper piled up to 24,429 tons, largest turnover since late February when more than 75,000 tons changed hands, figures released today disclosed.

Heavy week-end demand carried over today, metal dealers reported, with the price firm in all quarters at 11⅛ cents a pound.

In line with the expanded buying, the refinery price for scrap copper was lifted ¼ cent for No. 1 heavy wire scrap to the equivalent of about 11¼ cents for refined metal.

G. M. C. Head Asks Leave of Absence

New York, June 3 (AP).—William S. Knudsen, president of General Motors Corporation, has asked directors of the company for a leave of absence which will permit him to devote his full time to the National Defense Council. He was named to the council by President Roosevelt last week.

It was reported in financial circles that 50-year-old Charles E. Wilson, executive vice president, would take charge of operations of the company in Knudsen's absence.

Domestic Zinc Prices Rises to 6.25 Cents

New York, June 3 (AP).—The price of zinc in the domestic market was advanced ¼ of a cent a pound today, to 6.25 cents, East St. Louis basis.

Recent active inquiry for the metal, especially for export, served to strengthen the market. The new price marked the second advance in a little more than a week.

SEC Postpones Utility Hearing

The scheduled hearing yesterday on the Cities Service Light & Power Co.'s integration plan was postponed by the Securities Commission until next week.

Representatives of the company, who requested the postponement, indicated they would be prepared then to proceed with hearings and would not ask, as have some other holding companies, a chance to look first at the commission's ideas of how their companies ought to be integrated. Integration has been ordered under the 1935 utility holding company act.

Italy's Fence-Sitting Keeps Stock Traders On Sidelines; Turnover Shrinks as List Dips Fractionally in Torpid Deals

New York, June 3.—The disposition of traders to stay on the sidelines until Italy's war position is clearly defined caused a further shrinkage in stock exchange business today. Prices sank fractions to several points, notably steels, stores and metals, in the dullest five-hour session since February 26. Refusal of most holders to offer shares for sale was important in keeping the decline within orderly bounds. The composite price for 100 key stocks lost 0.65 point on transfer of 445,705 shares.

Foreign bonds were irregular while in the domestic corporate list there was strength in Cleveland Union Terminal and Boston & Maine liens. Allied currencies eased while Swiss and Swedish funds firmed a little in foreign exchange transactions. Wheat rallied late to erase losses, closing ⅛ cent off to ¾ up. Poor foreign cables and good weather kept cotton on the downside. The close was 2 to 10 points off. Corn had gains ranging to nearly a cent a bushel.

Trade News Favorable

Business news was favorable, particularly for the steels, metals and a miscellany of other shares. Effect on sentiment from further gains in domestic industry, however, was more than offset by the depressing news from Europe and apprehensions at home. On the other side of the mass air raid on Paris was assessed as another Nazi move to encourage Italians to take the plunge into war.

In the United States a good deal of jitters could be observed following Gov. Lehman's announcement that part of the National Guard has been called to protect arms and armories in the State. Cooler heads pointed out that the precaution is logical and proper. It affected sentiment nevertheless.

The American Iron & Steel Institute reported steel production for the current week above 80 per cent at the best level since the end of January. Incidentally, current operations are at a high for the period for at least ten years. In the corresponding week of 1937, it will be recalled, the first definite signal of the slump which set in later in the year was given. In the last week of May, 1937, steel production was at 91 per cent. In the first week of June the rate fell to 77.4 per cent, off 13.6 points.

Steel Issues Dip

Steel common, second most active stock today, closed just above 45 for a net loss of 1¼. Bethlehem finished at 68, off 2⅜. Republic gave up ⅝. Kennecott and Anaconda, both active in the metals division, lost ¾ and 1 point respectively. International Paper eased while Pennsylvania Railroad was one of the few active issues to improve. Alleghany, a penny stock led the list on 21,300 shares, closing at ⅛ for a loss of 1/16.

Chrysler, American Airlines, Douglas Aircraft, Down Chemical, Eastern Air Lines, Union Carbide and some of the mail order stocks were off a point or more. On 24 stocks which went to new lows for the year or longer were included Great Western Sugar, Hershey, Reynolds Tobacco and St. Joseph Lead. The latter was down 1⅝. Westinghouse Electric lost 2 points and duPont 1⅛. American Can and American Smelting posted gains of 1½ and ⅞ respectively.

Foreign Bond List Nervous In Light Deals

Japanese Issues Up Moderately; Italian Liens Show Loss

By the Associated Press

New York, June 3.—Dollar bonds of wide-scattered foreign nations bobbed up and down nervously in light dealings in the New York Stock Exchange today as German bombs fell on Paris.

Up 3⅝ at 79¼ were Great Consolidated Electric Power of Japan 7s of '44, and fractions ahead were Japanese government 6½s at 77½ and 5½s at 61¼.

Norway 6s of '44 were 4 higher at 38 and the 4s of '63 up 1¼ at 26⅝. Gaining 2½ at 10 were Serbs, Croats and Slovene 8s of '62, and Belgian 6½s of '49 added 1¾ at 45½.

But while some foreign issues advanced, others retreated. New South Wales 5s of '58 on sale of one bond at 35 lost 5. Fractions to 1 or more lower were German, Danish and some Italian loans.

United States Governments were 7-32 point lower to 2-32 higher.

Fractions to 1 or more advanced were Anaconda Copper 4½s at 102¾, Firestone Tire 3½s at 104, Goodrich 4½s at 101⅛, International Paper 5s of '47, International Hydro Electric 6s at 41½ and Pennsylvania General 4½ of '65 at 95.

About as much lower were International Telephone 5s at 26½, Santa Fe 4s of '95 at 101½, Alleghany 5s of '49 at 59½ and Delaware & Hudson refunding 4s at 40.

Less Than Forecast Treasury Deficit Hits 3.4 Billions

By the Associated Press

The Treasury reported yesterday a deficit of $3,455,692,542 in the first 11 months of the fiscal year, which will end June 30. Expenditures were $8,596,311,270 and receipts $5,140,618,727.

While the deficit is somewhat smaller than was expected last fall, the Budget Bureau has predicted that the vast defense program will produce a deficit of approximately $4,173,700,000 in the fiscal year starting July 1.

The public debt, meanwhile, has reached a record high of $42,807,765,653. To meet the borrowing needs of the defense program, the Administration has asked Congress to increase the debt limit from $45,000,000,000 to $48,000,000,000.

Land Bank Bill Sent to Senate

A bill to expand the borrowing power of the Federal Land banks and possibly to reduce interest rates was passed by the House yesterday and sent to the Senate.

The measure, a rewritten version of a broader farm credit bill sponsored by Secretary Wallace, would make Federal Reserve Bank facilities available to the land banks and would, in effect, guarantee Land Bank bonds through an exchange arrangement with the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation.

Baltimore, June 3 (AP).—Carloadings of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad in May totaled 214,401, an increase of 47,963 loads over May, 1939, and a gain of 25,987 over the 188,414 loads for April, 1940.

In the week ended June 1 the road's carloadings aggregated 45,155, a gain of 8,949 over the corresponding week of 1939 but a loss of 4,881 from the 49,946 loads for the week ended May 25, 1940.

Dividend Is Omitted By Steamship Firm

Boston, June 3 (AP).—Directors of Eastern Steamship Lines, Inc., today omitted dividend action on $2 convertible preferred stock due July 1. Arrears on the issue were cleared in 1939 with payment of $3 and regular quarterly dividends of 50 cents each were paid in January and April this year.

The company showed a deficit in April of $149,142 and deficit for the first four months of the year of $563,773, compared with deficits of $57,238 and $386,061 in the comparable 1939 periods.

Allies Reported Eager To Buy Quicksilver

New York, June 3 (AP).—England and France are eager buyers of quicksilver, local dealers reported today.

Inquiries are currently estimated at more than 250 flasks, but it was believed further supplies, if openly offered, would be readily taken up.

The price was advanced $5 over the week-end to $200 per flask of 76 pounds.

Steel Output To Reach High For 6 Months

Weeks Rate to Jump To 80.3%; Domestic Orders Broaden

By the Associated Press

New York, June 3.—Steel mills in the United States will jump operating schedules to 80.3 per cent of capacity this week, an increase of 3.4 points from the preceding week and the highest since late January, the American Iron & Steel Institute estimated today.

A month ago operations were at the rate of 65.8 per cent of capacity and a year ago 54.2 per cent.

Steel production dropped to around 60 per cent at the end of April in a steady downward trend since the start of the year. A series of sharp increases in output, coincident with a big expansion demand from Allied and neutral nations, carried output back to the current levels.

While foreign buying has accounted for most of the increase, steel quarters said, domestic orders have broadened considerably in recent weeks.

Government orders for the new defense program, it was added, will take some months to affect consumption figures.

Bata Shoe Firm Enjoined Under Child Labor Act

Baltimore, June 3 (AP).—The Bata Shoe Co., of Belcamp, Md., consented to the signing today by Federal Judge Calvin W. Chestnut of a judgment permanently enjoining it from violating the child labor provisions of the Fair Labor Standards Act.

Katherine Lenroot, chief of the United States Children's Bureau, had charged in a complaint that the company had employed 17 minors under 16 years of age between September 26, 1939, and last April 19, and that it had shipped goods manufactured at its Belcamp plant in interstate commerce in violation of Federal law.

Bernard J. Flynn, United States attorney, and Beverley R. Worrell, Government counsel, said the child-labor injunction was the first of its kind in Maryland. The Bata concern recently was fined $8,000 and ordered to make restitution of approximately $10,000 to its employes as a result of wage and hour violation charges to which it pleaded guilty.

$111,237,000 Backlog Reported by Lockheed

Special Dispatch to The Post

Burbank, Calif., June 3.—Lockheed Aircraft Corporation for the four-month period ended April 30 reported net sales of $12,556,846, as compared with $5,867,777 for the corresponding period in 1939, President Robert E. Gross announced today. Deliveries of airplanes for the period showed a 70 per cent increase over the first four months of 1939.

Backlog of unfilled orders as of May 15, 1940, amounted to approximately $111,237,000, as compared with unfilled business of $43,953,725 at the close of the fiscal year on December 31, 1939. New orders received by Lockheed during the period beginning January 1, 1940, and ending May 15 last amounted to approximately $80,037,362.

Business Failures Decrease in Week

New York, June 3 (AP).—Business failures in the United States dropped to 239 during the week ended May 30, which included the Memorial Day holiday, from 297 in the preceding week and 249 a year ago, Dun & Bradstreet reported today.

The latest figure, second lowest for the year, compared with the lowest of 225 touched in the week of February 22, which also included a holiday.

Cotton Prices Unsettled By Bombay Drop

Futures Decline 2 To 9 Points on Poor Export Outlook

By the Associated Press

New York, June 3.—Cotton futures declined 2 to 9 points today in a market unsettled by gloomy outlook for export prospects of the new crop.

New low prices for the year at Bombay focused attention on the fact foreign cotton is currently selling well below the United States staple and underscored the possibility foreign use of domestic cotton might be severely limited.

October led the decline for a time under pressure of hedging sales believed to be against Brazilian growths. Such operations have increased lately since price restrictions were inaugurated in the Liverpool cotton market.

Reduced Output Of Autos Forecast In Current Month

Detroit, June 3 (AP).—Ward's Automotive Reports in its current issue predicts a sharp rebound in motor vehicle output this week from the holiday-curtailed production of 60,980 units last week. Ward's says, however, that "it is unlikely any June week will hover as closely to the 100,000-mark as was the case during May . . .

"Indications are that the industry will curtail its operations in fair degree during June, as an outcome of the substantial stocks of finished cars now in dealer hands.

$50,000,000 Black Tom Award Upheld

U. S. Appeals Court Finds Damage Ruling Political, Not Judicial

The $50,000,000 award to victims of the Black Tom and Kingsland munitions dump explosions in New Jersey during the last World War was unanimously upheld in the United States Court of Appeals yesterday.

Granted by the German-American Mixed Claims Commission in October, 1939, the award was attacked by the Z and P Assets Realization Corporation, of New York City, on the grounds it was made in the absence of the German member of the commission.

In upholding the opinion of Justice Jennings Bailey, of the District Court, that the Secretary of State had certified the awards to the Secretary of the Treasury and the courts could no longer interfere, the decision of the appellate court went a step further. Justice Justin Miller's opinion stated that the action of the commission was a political, not a judicial question.

The German-American Commission ruled in October, 1930, that there was no evidence of German sabotage in the munitions dump explosions. The commission reversed its ruling in June, 1936, after discovering evidence that the decision had been obtained by fraud.

The German representative did not attend a meeting of the commission called in June, 1939, to review all previous evidence. Ignoring his absence, the commission made the awards. There were 153 claims involved. Principal beneficiaries were the Lehigh Valley Railroad, acting as agent for the Canadian Car & Foundry Co., Ltd., and the Bethlehem Steel Co.

Written by Justice Miller, the decision was concurred in by Justices Fred M. Vinson and Wylie B. Rutledge.

O'Mahoney Tells Dunbarton Class Of 'Living Freedom'

Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming, chairman of the Monopoly Committee, told graduates of Dunbarton College last night that Americans must learn from the chaos in Europe to use the products of education and science constructively.

"We, here in America, have based our society upon a belief in the dignity of man. Our religion expounds man's freedom of will; our democracy translates this into the other, living freedoms that go with it."

The graduates were Miss Agnes Veronica Doherty, of Cheyenne, Wyo., the Senator's niece, and Miss Mary Rita Barry, Miss Mary Rita Sheehy and Miss Margaret Mary Shireman, all of Washington.

Dr. Roy J. Deferrari, secretary general of Catholic University, awarded the diplomas. Senator O'Mahoney was introduced by the Very Rev. James M. Campbell.

La. Governor Says Senators Should Retire

Here for Conferences, He Gets Comeback From Sen. Overton

Gov. Sam Houston Jones, of Louisiana, who wrecked the Huey Long machine, came here yesterday to see President Roosevelt about national defense, Attorney General Jackson about the Louisiana graft cleanup and Secretary Wallace about Louisiana strawberries.

Yesterday he talked with Wallace and Jesse Jones, Federal Loan Administrator. Today he will see Secretary Morgenthau at 10:15 a. m.; President Roosevelt at 11 a. m.; Attorney General Jackson at 3 p. m.; Federal Security Administrator Paul V. McNutt at 4 p. m., and the press at 5 p. m.

Yesterday he remarked that corruption had not been entirely cleaned out in his State. He urged the retirement from office of Senators Ellender and Overton, of Louisiana. The State, he said, has returned to democracy and the voters can name their choice.

Senator Overton Comes Back at Jones

In response to Gov. Jones' suggestion that Louisiana's two Senators ought to retire, Senator Overton declared last night:

". . . The sin committed by the two Senators was not supporting Jones as the self-styled reform Governor. Jones has yet to give any evidence of his being a friend of reform.

"Jones may be temporarily the cock o' the walk in Louisiana, but he doesn't amount to a hill of beans in Washington."

Compromise Plan Offered By Transit Co.

New Certificates May Settle Suit Of Bondholders

Capital Transit Co. yesterday heralded settlement of bondholder suits pending against it by filing with the Securities Commission a registration statement for certificates that would be issued to the plaintiffs, bondholders of the Anacostia & Potomac River Railroad Co. and City & Suburban Railway.

Capital Transit filed registration for $3,439,000 in certificates of modification, assumption and guarantee bearing 3¾ per cent interest and maturing December 1, 1951. These would be offered under terms of a compromise settlement of the suits effected last fortnight, in exchange for A. & P. R. R. Co. 5s of April 1, 1949, totaling $2,097,000, and City & Suburban 5s of August 1, 1948, totaling $1,342,000.

Thus yesterday's registration would make possible carrying out of the compromise settlement, providing a lower interest rate for the plaintiff bondholders and longer maturities.

A hearing before the Public Service Commission on the proposed settlement is scheduled for the near future.

"Civil airports," he declared, "like highways, are of prime importance in any strategical or tactical plans for the defense of the United States."

The club will hold its annual picnic Sunday at the Potomac River farm of Charles M. Upham, engineer-director of the American Road Builders Association.

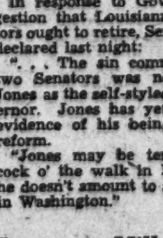
Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Rowland Roberts conducts the Department of Agriculture Orchestra Monday evening in the South Building Auditorium. Program: Overture to "Die Entfuehrung aus dem Serail" (Mozart), Prelude and Fugue in C sharp minor (Bach-Roberts), "Leonore" Overture No. 3 (Beethoven), Overture, Nocturne and Scherzo from "A Midsummer Night's Dream" (Mendelssohn), Excerpts from "Swan Lake" (Chaikovski), "Perpetuum Mobile" (Strauss), "Espana" (Chabrier).

Dr. Walter Bauer's practice of giving the members of the Department of Agriculture Orchestra frequent opportunities to play unhackneyed compositions apparently had its influence upon his assistant conductor, Rowland Roberts, who made his second appearance on the podium last evening in South Building auditorium. The young director began his program with the relatively unfamiliar overture to Mozart's "Die Entfuehrung aus dem Serail," introduced his own transcription of the C sharp minor prelude and fugue from Bach's "Well Tempered Clavichord," and chose for a Chaikovski item three excerpts from the ballet, "Lebedincie Ozero." In other respects the concert followed the broad highway of Beethoven "Leonore" Overture No. 3, three numbers from Mendelssohn's "A Midsummer Night's Dream," the "Perpetual Motion" of Johann Strauss and Chabrier's "Espana."



BROWN

Mozart's first German opera, "The Abduction From the Seraglio," came to the written because Kaiser Josef II had taken up the idea of encouraging opera and drama in the German language. Quick to grasp the chance for imperial favor, Mozart suggested two subjects, only to have them turned down, and then set to work upon a libretto offered by Gottlieb Stephanie, inspector of the opera. Very much concerned at the time with overcoming parental objections to his marriage, he named the heroine after his fiancee, Constanze Weber, and his love for her is generally supposed to have inspired some of the loveliest melodies in the score.

The Kaiser was not wholly satisfied with the opera about which he made the often quoted criticism that there were too many notes in Mozart's music. This was not as silly a remark as it seems at first thought, for he probably meant that the music was too elaborate in style to be truly German. The opera was so well received by the public, however, that it was given 14 performances in 1782 and remained in the repertory until 1787, when the Kaiser, discouraged by the failure of his plan to produce German masterpieces by command, restored the Italian opera.

In his transcription of the Bach prelude and fugue, Mr. Roberts did a conscientious and musicianly piece of work. For the sake of contrast, he scored the prelude for strings and the triple fugue for full orchestra, giving the first subject to the violoncello, the second to the flute and the third to horns and trombones to build up a sonorous climax. His scoring preserved the clarity of the voices, but because he did not provide some sustaining resonances the work sounded at times thin and transparent.

The orchestra cooperated with Mr. Roberts throughout the concert in its usual zestful manner, and a sizable audience gave hearty encouragement. There will be a second performance of the program tonight.

Contract Bridge

Printed Praise

Not the least of the pleasures of tournament bridge is having your finely bid and played hands recorded publicly and permanently.

Today's hand was neatly engineered by Mrs. Caroline Cheeks, of Washington, to win a small slam at spades. It required two finesses, an endplay and a postponement of trump leads to bring it to a successful conclusion. The cards and bidding are shown in today's box.

Today's Hand

Both Sides Vulnerable.

SOUTH DEALER.

Mrs. Cheeks
♠ A Q 10 4 3

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	2 ◇	Pass
2 NT	Pass	4 NT	Pass
5 ♠	Pass	6 ♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Q ♡.

Dummy's ace took the queen of hearts, and the seven of spades followed, the king from East indicating the bad division. Mrs. Cheeks won with the ace and immediately shifted to the nine of diamonds, taking the finesse and cashing the ace to discard a heart. The four of clubs was led and the queen finessed successfully. The ace of clubs was led and then the nine; West threw off a heart and Mrs. Cheeks trumped in dummy, returning to her hand with the heart king to play the club three. West again was pressed, but he threw another heart and dummy again ruffed. Declarer entered her hand by trumping a heart and led the four of spades. West won with the five and was forced to lead from the jack-six of spades into South's queen-ten. Mrs. Cheeks lost only a spade trick.

YOU'VE ASKED ME WHY THE POLICE CHIEF AND I HAVE ORDERED THE POLICE NOT TO RESIST BANK ROBBERIES. HERE'S THE ANSWER!
Don't say a man to rob the City's banks suggested - or an explosion will take place unexpectedly in the down-town district - killing thousands! "THE UNKNOWN"
BUT THIS IS PREPOSTEROUS! CERTAINLY YOU WOULDN'T PERMIT AN ANONYMOUS NOTE TO MAKE YOU FOLLOW SUCH DRASTIC TERMS! "THE UNKNOWN"--FIDDLESTICKS! --THAT NAME ALONE SHOULD CONVINCE YOU THAT YOU'RE DEALING WITH NOTHING MORE THAN A CRANK'S IDLE THREATS.
THAT WAS MY FIRST REACTION, TOO, BUT NOW I KNOW THAT THE CITY IS FACED WITH A REAL DANGER!
YOU KNOW--?
YES! A FEW DAYS AGO I RECEIVED A TELEPHONE CALL PREDICTING AN EXPLOSION--LUCKILY IT HAPPENED IN A DESERTED DISTRICT AND NO ONE WAS INJURED!

WJSV's first annual dramatic competition is over and the business of judging is now in full swing. In the period from February 3 to May 25, 17 local little theater groups, all amateurs, have each had a half hour crack at putting on their own show. The local dramatic critics are now in the process of listening to records and WJSV's program director, Lloyd Dennis, has hopes the boys will hand in their verdicts during the week.

The enthusiasm the amateur Hamlet can work up is an amazing thing. They all take their work as seriously as do the gilded lilies on Broadway, but at the same time they get plenty of laughs out of the business. I have a great sympathy for all amateur thespians, having once played a character part named "Dopey" in a little theater catastrophe in my home town. It was three acts of pantomime for "Dopey" with the only line he had being spoken on curtain upon the arrival of a locomotive. The night of the performance the locomotive got stuck and the curtain was rung down on a scene of great confusion and a deeply wounded "Dopey." It had taken many weary weeks of hard rehearsing to master the intricate line, "My—a locomotive."

I foreswore the amateur theater when it became apparent that I was typed off my performance as "Dopey." Incidentally the one, the only and the original "Dopey" as played before bored houses was your author. Mr. Disney's classic came sometime later.

Max Wylie, the head of the Columbia Broadcasting System's very pert script department, has consented to tear himself away from his New York chores long enough to come down to Washington to address the amateurs who competed in the WJSV contest. Incidentally, there is a gaudy cup that goes to the winning troupe.

Orphans in Love

by Marion White

Ellen Carlan has loved Peter Storm since both were children. They take refuge from a storm in the deserted old Tucker mansion and note the resemblance of Peter to Jonathan Tucker. John Abbott and his wife, who manage the Tucker estate, fear their deception 25 years ago when they abandoned the only heir at the orphanage, will be discovered. Abbott offers Peter a job in his firm. Mother Rosa at the orphanage sends Ellen to Rosalind, a famous designer who hires her as a model. The Abbotts decide Peter and Millicent would be a good match. Ellen models a bridal gown at Rosalind's fall show, which Roger Maillard attends with his sister. The handsome millionaire sportsman falls in love with Ellen but she declines his invitations. Ellen gets her chance at dressmaking when a maid spills ink on a bridal gown the night before the Van Dorne wedding. Roger Maillard stands guard while Ellen finishes the substitute dress. It is accepted and Rosalind doubles Ellen's salary, promoting her to designer. On Christmas Day, Peter and Ellen return to the orphanage.

Chapter 29

"LIKE the work?"

"I love it. If you knew how I despised insurance statistics!"

He laughed. "I do. I despised wholesale hardware."

Before they realized it, they were driving up the long path to the familiar building. From all over the grounds, youngsters materialized, crying out their cheerful greetings and surveying the promising array of packages with eyes too bright with expectancy to uphold the modest reserve of their manners.

Main Hallway

And there was Mother Rosa, waiting for them in the main hallway, and Sister Cecelia, making no attempt to hide her delight at seeing Ellen and Peter together, and Sister Agatha, torn between the commotion of welcome and the obligations to her turkeys in the oven.

"You can ring the gong, Peter," Mother Rosa offered. "I told Father Joseph to come over with the boys as soon as they heard it, and not a moment sooner. This place is madhouse enough. . . ."

It was a mad-house indeed, but a mad-house of such joy and gladness that one wondered why Christmas could not last through the entire year or at least long enough for the spirit of goodwill to seep so deeply in the souls of men that loving kindness could never be forgotten.

Looks Well

"My goodness, Ellen!" Sister Cecelia beamed. "I haven't seen you looking so well in months. You see, Mother, the new job is doing her good. If she's worked to death, it certainly is doing her no harm."

Later on, after the feasting and festivities, after the children had been sent off for naps, and their elders had sought relaxation in their easy chairs, Peter and Ellen walked over the hill to the Tucker house, and he said the same thing.

"You've changed, Ellen. You've grown up or something. I never knew you were so—so——" He stopped abruptly, finished off the sentence with a laugh.

Ellen laughed too, and said gayly: "I always change on Christmas." But her laugh was a little forced, because one note of bitterness had crept into the joy of the day. Yes, Peter, you knew, she thought. You've known me always, and there was a day when you saw me differently . . . before you met her.

But she put the thought aside fiercely. Today there would be no bitterness between them. Today she would not pamper her illusions. After all, Peter did not belong to her. He never had. Never, in all their years together had he tied himself to her.

Never had he said: "Ellen, I love you. I want to marry you." The idea was something which had grown and flowered in her own imagination: she alone must bury it.

Looked at House

At the foot of the hill they stopped, and Peter looked up at the house, his eyes shining.

"Think, Ellen. Today we go straight up to the front door. I have the key in my pocket. Today it can be our house . . ."

Our house. That was the way he had always spoken. Only today she understood him. They were brother and sister in the same family, playing the game of make-believe as children do.

"I've got a surprise for you. At least, I hope I have."

"A surprise? What is it, Peter?"

"Wait and see."

Opens Door

They hurried up the hill, stood for a moment under the narrow doorway which had refused them shelter that Sunday in the rain, so long ago. Then Peter bent down, put the key in the lock. He opened the door, peered into the dark hall. He caught the sense of freshness in the air, banishment of mould and dust.

"Yes, sir. The surprise is on!"

In that instant, he touched a button, flooded the entire lower floor with light. Ellen caught her breath sharply. The house had come to life!

The old Tucker House had suddenly awakened; in this moment it rang with friendliness and welcome. It cried out to them: "Merry Christmas!"

It threw off the cloak of darkness and isolation which it had worn for 20 years and welcomed them, the boy who might have belonged to it, and the girl he might have brought home to it.

Sudden Tears

Ellen's eyes filled with sudden tears. She did not even try to hide them. She knew, even without looking up, that Peter's eyes were misty too. She blinked, saw through the blurring moisture the changes which had been wrought.

Gone was the dust and dirt, the foot-prints on the hardwood floors and the spider-webs from the ceilings.

Gone were the muslin slip covers and newspapers over the carpet. All the rich, warm tones sprang into view; the living room, with its deeep green and gold furnishings . . . the hospitable hallway, with the bright red carpeting covering each step to the floor above . . . the dining room of Wedgewood blue with its gleaming mahogany furniture.

She saw flowers in the vases—bittersweet and Japanese lanterns and silver leaves . . . holly wreaths in every window . . .

"What have you don, Peter? What does it mean?"

He swallowed hard. "We wanted to see it this way, didn't we? You said it was waiting to welcome someone. I had two of the women from the village come up and clean. I aked them to fix it up for Christmas. They did a good job, didn't they?"

Blinks Another Tear

She nodded, blinked away another tear. "Why did you tell me, Peter? Why didn't you let me think it happened . . . just this way? By the touch of your key in the lock . . ."

She was looking across the room, at the picture which had opened this opportunity to them. Now, in the glaring brilliance of the overhead chandelier, she say it as she had never seen it that dark, rainy Sunday afternoon.

She saw it clearly and distinctly, the bright focus of every light in the room. And today, in this new clarifying radiance, it was more the living image of Peter than it had ever been before.

She caught her breath at the revelation; her hand flew to her throat in a quick gesture of amazement.

Peter, standing beside her, was staring at the portrait too, but he gave no expression to his thoughts. Rather, he turned aside abruptly, as if the sight were an annoyance.

"Come, let's see the rooms upstairs, Ellen." He took her arm, led her back toward the hall. "I think we ought to take that down," he was saying, a little irritably.

"It makes me feel as if there were a ghost in the house."

But she knew differently. She knew that as long as the picture was there, he would be haunted by the uncertainty which it awakened within him.

The stairway was wide, and the deep red carpeting had a thick, lustrous pile. The cleaning women had worked hard, Ellen thought, to achieve this restoration.

Every bit of woodwork had been rubbed down and poliahed; the bright frames of pictures glistened.

As he reached the landing above, Peter turned another switch and the hall lighted up. "I found that the electricity had never been turned off," he told her with a grin.

"Remember that day we sat downstairs in the dark? We never thought to try a switch."

"We probably wouldn't have dared."

To Be Continued.

Col. Buckey Estate Over $200,000; Sister Is Claimant

Col. Mervyn Chandos Buckey, U. S. A., retired, collateral descendant of George Washington, who died here March 20, left an estate valued at upwards of $200,000, it was revealed yesterday in United States District Court.

His sister, Mrs. Alice Buckey Torrey, wife of Col. Daniel H. Torrey, U. S. A., stationed in Manila, the Philippines, has petitioned for a probate and administration of his will. Made April 11, 1922, the will left the estate to Col. Buckey's father, Thomas William Buckey, who died October 19, 1925. Mrs. Torrey, the sole survivor, claims the entire estate.

Real estate at an assessed value of $200,000, includes property at 1911 R street northwest, 418 Franklin street northwest, and farms in Prince William County, Va. Personal property, mostly stocks and bonds, is valued at $14,830, while debts total $14,287. Attorney representing the estate is Eugene R. West.

Spotsylvania to Vote Today on Tax Increase

Fredericksburg, Va., June 3.—Spotsylvania County residents will go to the polls tomorrow to decide whether they will increase their tax burden in order to provide more money for the operation of schools in 1940-41.

Firemen Give $670 to Red Cross, Bringing Total to $96,872

Into Red Cross headquarters he took six $100 bills, one 50 and one 20. The $670 was Washington firefighters' contribution toward the District Chapter's drive to raise $900,000 as Washington's share of the American Red Cross War Relief Fund.

With yesterday's other contributions, it brought the total received so far to $96,872.62.

The day's total of $11,816.20 included $2,000 from an anonymous contributor, $1,000 from the Andrew Mellon Educational and Charity Trust, $500 from J. Sanders, $200 from Miss Anna Carry, $200 from Miss Isabel P. Furbank, and $200 from Mrs. Laura Wilder.

Money received at booths included $141.75 from employes of the American Stores, $261.32 from employes of Woodward & Lothrop, $230.25 from Treasury Department employes; $504.84, Federal Home Loan Bureau; $1,043, State Department; $261, Veterans' Administration; $169.50, Federal Reserve, and $1,154.75, Department of Agriculture.

Davis Laments Raid on Paris

Tonight the District chapter will inaugurate Tuesday and Thursday night meetings for making surgical dressings, as the demand for dressings has increased to such an extent that the 500 volunteers engaged in the work daytimes are not enough.

Meanwhile, Norman H. Davis, chairman of the American Red Cross, issued a statement deploring the German bombing of Paris. He said an International Red Cross conference in London before the war, attended by representatives of all nations now engaged in war, issued a unanimous appeal to the world for an agreement prohibiting bombing of open cities.

The appeal "has not been heeded," he said. "In fact, established agreements against warfare on civilians are not even respected."

2 Chest Unit Chairmen Call Meetings in Week

Two Community Chest unit area chairmen, E. K. Morris and Frank J. Luchs, have called meetings for this week to organize volunteer campaign forces ahead of the vacation exodus, Paul D. Sleeper, unit chairman, said yesterday.

From the western area, 12 recently appointed division chairmen will meet at 11 a. m. tomorrow in the board room of the Federal Storage Co., 1701 Florida avenue northwest. Division chairmen from the central area will meet at 4 p. m. Wednesday in the board room of Shannon & Luchs Co., 1505 H street northwest.
